A simple monument will be erected over them, bearing the inscription: "John Howard Payne, author of Home, Sweet Home. Born June 9, 1792. Died April 10, 1852." John Howard Payne was not born in Bos-ton, as is stated on the monument at Tunis, but in New York city. His father removed to the sapital of Massachusetts when his son was very young, and opened a boarding achool in that city. The future poet was a dower, amblished a weekly newspaper, the Fly, which is said to have given prom-ise of great literary ability. When 13 years of age he was placed in a counting Mour 6 and New York, a situation most dis-ta could be him, the tediousness of which "Araineed by acting as the editor of the Thespian Mirror. diramatic criticisms contained in this journal made him some influential acquaintances, among them a Mr. Seaman, who sent him to Schenectady college to be educated. While there he edited Pastime, a weekly magazine, the first number of which appeared in 1807. In 1806 he returned to Boston to prepare for the stage, and continued literary labor there as editor of the Mirror. His first eppearance on the stage was made at here were to England, the south and west. Miss Tree, a sister of Elien Tree, sang the song upon its first pro-iuction. It was popular immediately. A hundred thousand copies were sold in one year, but not one cent was paid to the au-thor by the fortunate publishers. It has been distributed by millions of copies since then, and the greatests ingers have delight any main of hearers with its simple and touching music and sentiment. Mr. Payne's literary work while in Europe was carried on sometimes in London, and sometimes in Paris. It was precarious as to its financial results, and the gifted author is said to have endured gruen hardships by reason of poverty. business of this port, and also plans of a proposed addition to the examining ware-honse on the Esplansde. The ministers received the proposal with much favor, especially Sir Hector. The covernment owns 300 feet immediately west of the present warehouse. The plans sub-mitted to the ministers were of a substan-tial fire proof addition about 280 feet in length, with ample compartments for the storage of all classes of merchandise except-ing explosives and oils. The ministers were alive to the great advantages of such a structure, and, as mentioned in the press at the time, Sir Hector promised that a sum would be included in the estimates for the same. It was not known, however, to what extent the government would go, but it was understood that a something in keeping with the prospective requirements of the port would be erected.
