Songs of the Pines--By James Ernest Caldwell

(TORONTO: WM. BRIGGS.)

Among Canadian singers Mr. Caldwell takes his place with some note worthy performances. "Songs of the Pines" contain a number of well rounde and melodious lyrics, not unfrequently touched with the true poetic energy —New York Independent.

The product of a lover of inanimate nature who knows how to discern the "books in brooks, sermons in stones," and who is too a competent student of human nature.—Western British American.

The themes are thoroughly Canadian, with descriptions of photographi fidelity. Has exquisite touches of pathos and beauty.—Christian Guardian

Has presented to the public not only some good verse, but a deep-soule patriotism towards Canada and all that is Canadian.—Regina Leader.

Worthy of a place in every home. - Ingersoll Chronicle.

Has a gift for bringing a picture to the mind.—Saturday Review.

At his best in describing the magnificent scenery of the Ottawa Valley —Barrie Examiner.

The writer has evidently a love and respect for the daily round of ordin ary life which he does not fear to voice.—Ottawa Journal.

"John Bull and Sons."—Song. Words, James Ernest Caldwell. Music Cecil J. A. Birkett. Ottawa: C. H. Thorburn.

"John Bull! John Bull!
All the world knows him well,
For solid worth
The whole round earth
Has only one John Bull!"
