

elephants and a certain stipulated quantity of cinnamon. Finding afterwards that the Portuguese affairs in Ceylon were less prosperous, he receded from these conditions and would only agree to give two elephants as the yearly tribute, but the peace was concluded.

END OF THE SIXTH VOLUME.

Printed by George Ramsay & Co.
Edinburgh, 1812.