

COLBURN'S STANDARD NOVELISTS.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

SECOND SERIES.

Comprising The Sutherlands, The Man of many Friends, Doubts and Fears, and Passion and Principle.

"This is a book abounding in pleasant scenes, good sayings, and witty dialogues. The eye of a keen playful wit and satirist has been upon the world in a vast variety of its spheres of action and affectation, and here we have 'the harvest of that unquiet eye.'"—Blackwood's Magazine.

"'Sayings and Doings' is a work of more than ordinary merit, comprising admirable portraits of human character with tales of real or fictitious life."—Literary Chronicle.

SAYINGS AND DOINGS.

THIRD SERIES.

Comprising Cousin William, and Gervase Skinner.

"These tales partake of the merits of the two former series, while they excel them in vivacity, truth, and copiousness of character. In the facility with which Mr. Hook sketches personal peculiarities, he is unrivalled: the readiness with which he falls into all the little niceties and familiarities which mark the tone of society, is equally striking. The little appearance of labour in his writings—the singular warmth and unstudied vigour of his sentences, complete the effect, and make his works the most lively, and, at the same time, the truest pictures of life we have yet met with among late writers."—Atlas.

TREMAINE;

OR

THE MAN OF REFINEMENT.

BY R. P. WARD, ESQ.

"We feel assured that no fastidious person who is at all awake to his own defects, can read 'Tremaine' without being persuaded that it affords most useful and practical lessons of conduct. Our youth look to the poetry, and not to the reality, of life; and it is the object of this book to show that the individual who adopts such an idea mars his own happiness, as much as he fails in his duty towards the community. It is the object of this novel to show that no duty or innocent occupation which occupies the rest of the world is to be rejected with contempt; that society, if worthy in other respects, is not to be shunned because it is not super-eminently refined; and that even the sweets of literature are to be sipped rather than swallowed in a draught."—Quarterly Review.

"Mr. Ward's writings are of a higher purpose and value than to be read and forthwith dismissed; they are of the kind to be stored in private libraries, and recur to from time to time, as a still fresh solace and delight."—Sun.
