

part was covered by the Bastion, desired to use the ground, or said he did, but which, however, has not yet been utilized.

As soon as the question of removal arose, the old residents, without exception, evinced a warm desire for the preservation of their familiar sentinel block house, and through the efforts mainly of the late Chief Constable Stewart, backed by all whose support he sought, the building is still intact. Framed of strong squared timber, most substantially put together, it will be seen, withstood the force of the elements for close upon 56 years—a notable instance of how well Labine and his men did their work.

BOATING SCENE--DEPARTURE BAY

Two 6-pound carronades were the armament of the "fort," and there were in