Purchase of Shares.

"The purchase of the shares of the American Company having been made a month after the signature of the contract when the top price nearly was realized and the boom exhausted, was not a matter into which an element of corruption—i.e., of improper use of information authoritatively and secretly acquired, could have entered. We cannot therefore understand why a full disclosure was not made in October or at the moment when the cheques of rumor were first inflated with a tale of ministerial purchases. And on the transaction itself we are bound to record our view that a grievous error of judgment was committed when Sir Rufus Isaacs touched a share in a Marconi venture and commended the transaction to his colleagues. civic policy that the board of control is considering the advisability of establishing two systems of road improvement—one for the city proper and the other for the suburbs

For the suburbs the system would be similar to that of towns, and would therefore be less expensive and not a hardship upon the people. The present hard-and-fast policy of laying no sewers until a permanent roadway is simultaneously constructed is too severe upon the suburbs. because the permanent roadways are very expensive, and sewers are delayed until the expensive roadways are also built. Were block roadways built they would last until the construction of permanent roads would not be a burdensome expense. Block roadways would also permit of prompt laying of sewers, and of relief from mired roads in spring and fall.

Strong Argument.

Mr. White's argument against the Liberal policy was exhaustive. He spoke from the text. "Seek first the invincibility of the British fleet and all these other things will be added unto you." At the present time Canada, he said, had 400 millions of commerce on the seas to be protected.. We enjoyed the protection of Britain, whether we contributed one cent or not. No pressure had been brought to bear upon Canada and surely that was autonomy. All the other parts of the empire had already responded, while yet the Liberals were in power in Canada, and yet the "one mute voice" was the Dominion's. "The premier of the nation that's most in the eyes of the world today did nothing." The government, he said, hadn't in mind a policy of permanent contribution and had never mentioned such a thing, so that the idea of tribute was fallacious. The moral effect of a contribution would be the retarding of the race for the building of armaments.

Institution in Guelph Township First Novitiate for English-Speaking Candidates in Canada.

GUELPH, March 24.—(Special.)-The Jesuit fathers have purchased the Bedford farm, in Guelph Township, containing 300 acres, and will establish a novitiate. It will be the first novitiate for English-speaking candidates for the order in Canada. At the present time the English-speaking candidates are required to spend the probationary period in the novitiate at Montreal, where both English and French candidates study. The establishment of the institution here will do away with this, as all the English-speaking candidates will be stationed in the new college. The site of the Bedford farm, or Mount Saint Patrick, as it was named by the late Maurice O'Connor, who originally owned it, is ideally situated for such a purpose, being about a mile from the end of the street car line on the Elora road. The buildings are in splendid condition and the farm is one of the largest and most fertile in the township. It is the intention of the fathers to have another storey added to the large house, which stands on the property, and the plans for the necessary improvements are already in the hands of the architect.
