

- rred to, i.
 elations of,
 society, ii.
 ited States,
 its results,
 300; attack
 23
 uth, ii. 277
 ties, ii. 557,
 i. 201, 202;
 on, 143
 n view of, i.
 744; ii. 260,
 ation of, in gg.; reasons
 of a church,
 n, 569; to 7, 608; their 67, 580, 632;
 organization,
 towards them
 1. See Muni-
 States, i. 406,
 16. 658; ii.
 Act of 1883,
 encing opin-
 s, 255; shop-
 en, 258; city
 ts, 261; pro-
 ary men, 264;
 struggles, 466
 l politics, ii.
 heir equality,
 nding, 564
 lent), i. 54,
 ss, i. 130-132
 of, i. 552;
 129, 719; how far Congress is corrupt, 124; congressional caucus for the early presidential elections, 143; checks on the tyranny of the majority, 308; congressional oratory, 654; the future of Congress, 696 Connecticut, State of, i. 16, 414 Constitution (Federal) of 1789: difficulty of framing it, i. 19; opposition to its ratification, 23; causes of its excellence, 26; its double aspect, 29; functions of government it provides for, 30; objects of its framers, 31, 219, 303, 311; ii. 229; oath of allegiance to it, i. 127; balance of power it provides for, 219, 396; ii. 228, 229; its relation to Congress, i. 238; to the Courts, 239 sqq.; respect felt for it, 251, 304; Puritanic element in it, 299; its success, 303; peculiar distribution of governmental functions, 308; remarkable omissions, 311, 315; its development, 352; by amendment, 355; by interpretation and construction, 363; by legislation, 382; by usage, 383; collisions with the executive or legislature, 387; results of this development, 390; services of the Constitution to the nation, 396; provisions it owes to State constitutions, 686; the Constitution given at length, 695-708
 Constitution of California, i. 709 Constitution of Confederate States of 1861, i. 680
 Constitution of North American colonies,
 i. 16, 414; of 1777, 17 Constitutions of the States, i. 27; their history, 413, 458; mode of alteration, 418; their real nature, 419; their contents, 421; confusion of provisions, 427; less capacity for development than in the Federal Constitution, 425; their development, 434; types of constitutions, 437; their length, 438; growth of democratic tendencies, 439; comparative frequency of change, 440; jealousy of officials, 442; protection of private property, 443; extension of State interference, 444; penalties not always enforced, 444; legislation by a Constitution, 446; its demerits and its advantages, 453; constitutional conventions, 457