onto Home. An accident in a Toronto home might have had very serious consequences had it not been for Zam-Buk. Miss Martha Green of 9 Claremontstreet, in taking a pan of boiling fat from the oven spilt it over her right hand. "The boiling fat ran into the palm of my hand," she says, "and over all my fingers. You may well imagine the agony I suffered in consequence. I was almost wild with the pain. The hand became swollen and large blisters formed all over the palm and along the fingers. For over a month I was unable to use the hand at all. I tried several kinds of salves and liniments, but the wound seemed apparently no better. About this time I was advised to try Zam-Buk. I stopped using all other preparations and applied Zam-Buk instead. The very first application soothed my hand and seemed to draw out the fire and inflammation; and as I kept on using Zam-Buk the blisters gradually dried up and disappeared. In a very short time the scald was healed completely."

This is but one instance of the uses to which Zam-Buk can be so advantageously applied. It is equally effective for burns, cuts, bruises, abrasions, sprains and stiffness. It also cures eczema, ulcers, sores, blood poison, ringworm, scalp sores, chronic wounds, acne, blackheads, pimples, chafed places, sore feet and all skin diseases and injuries. Rubbed well on to the chest, in cases of cold, it relieves the aching and tightness, and applied as an emprocestion it. an embrocation it cures rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, etc. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price, 6 boxes for $2.50.

Mr. Foster repeatedly interrupted Mr. Bourassa to protest that the various findings by the commission were "deliberate" misrepresentations."

"Quite so," said Mr. Bourassa, "but that is all that I have to go on. It is all that the people of this country nave to go on. You should court an investigation, so as to clear yourself, as I hope and believe you will."

Mr. Bourassa reminded the house that Since Fowler's threat respecting the exposures of ministerial corruption, a solemn hush had fallen upon many Liberal papers and upon all the Liberal members of parliament. No wonder the country was satisfied that there was an arrangement whereby Fowler and his associates were not to be attacked, and in return, therefor, Mr. Fowler was not to produce his data and was not to tell "the inside truth about Hyman" and the connection between ministers charge," says Mr. Bourassa. "You have no proof, then why have you spoken as you did?" demanded the premier.

He declared that he would not be a detective and dig in the gutter for slander. He would not turn the house the connection between ministers members and women, wine and What did Mr. Fowler mean and who

"What did Mr. Fowler mean and who did he mean? Who are the ministers referred to? Are they the two who are sitting in front of me" (Messrs. Fielding and Fisher)?

This sally was greeted by uproarious laughter, in which the two ministers who are above suspicion, joined heartily.

"You may say that the immoral life of a minister is no reason for his being forced from the cabinet, and that certainly the private life of a private member is nobody's concern but his own. But Mr. Speaker, that is not the principle that was acknowledged when Sir Charles Dilke was driven from the cabinet, that was not the principle that guided william E. Borden Criticizes Laurier.

R. L. Borden severely criticized Sir Wilfrid's course, in not making his speech and announcement immediately after Mr. Bourassa's speech and having connived at Mr. Carvell's intervening with nu unfair attack on Mr. Fester. That certainly was not displaying a great regard for fair play to niembers. "In regard to the general accusation about 'wine, women and graft,' I claim that if any ministers of the to become a public scandal, such as crown are connected with wine, women and graft, in a way that has become a public scandal; if they have used the property of the government to carry on their profligate acts; if they have been put out of hotels and public places of amusement because they have been guilty of misconduct with women, and if anybody has a knowledge of these facts he must make them public. If I had the least particle of evidence I would make a charge, but I do not know. But I repeat that it is a scandal if the gov-ernment and parliament do not see that a purification takes place."

It might be argued that a personal charge was necessary, said Mr. Bourassa, but this was no case of legal quibbling, and the prime minister could now go to England after a hasty prorogation arranged to hush up charges of graft and corruption.

He concluded by moving a resolution in set terms demanding a parliamentary committee of enquiry.

Mr. Ross of Yale-Cariboo arose and declared that he had made no mention of the insurance report in the house. Fowler Money in Union Trust Mr. Carvell (Liberal, N.B.), who a prominent Forester, explained the fermation of the Union Trust Company to deal with the funds of the

I.O.F., and said the capital put into it by Mr. Fowler and his associates was only $10,000.

Mr. Carvell admitted that no losses were made under Mr. Foster's manage ment, but he held that that didn't matter, because if there had been a loss Mr. Foster would not have borne it, while he stood to advantage by a profit. Mr. Foster objected to the statement of Mr. Carvell that "he didn't know what documents the hon, member for North Toronto had in his posdocument he had was one that was before the commission, yet there was no evidence of it in the report, altho it bore the signature of Col. Davidson, who afterwards swore he was not present at this meeting, which was the one at which the transfer of stock took place.

Mr. Carvell denied that he had made any charges against Mr. Bennett. As to Bourassa's resolution he would vote against it, as he did not believe which have their beginning in a simple that parliament had any right to en-cold it is wise to know all you can quire into the private lives of mem-Sir Wilfrid Replies

Sir Wilfrid Laurier declared that bolus, the proper with the improper

"Sir," exclaimed the first minister. theatrically, "every man in this house is an honest man-(applause) and his character cannot be enough to make a charge."

Bourassa had been drafted differently, he would vote for it.

Mr. Fielding submitted that the leader of the opposition was not doing himself justice when he supported a proposition which laid down the principle that a member of the house should be arraigned and tried upon insinuations, gossip and rumor. There was no charge, and no charge, it was admitted by Mr. Bourassa himself, could be made by him. Mr. Fielding protested against a fishing expedition to enquire into the private life of every member of the house.

Armand Lavergne insisted that the way in which these charges had been received showed the great necessity of the investigation.

The committee as proposed by Mr. Bourassa, he continued, was a mere Bourassa, he continued, was a mere inquisition. It was to throw out a drag net. There was no one to prosecute. Bourassa himself had declined to make any charges.

The premier denied that there was any saw-off. Had not the leader of the opposition entered his solemn denial? received showed the great necessity of this investigation. The member for Wright (Mr. Devlin) had declared Mr. Wright (Mr. Devlin) had declared Mr. Foster until to sit in this house.

"I don't remember making that statement," spoke up Mr. Devlin.

"I do," said Mr. Lavergne, amid laughter. "Who are Mr. Fowler's charges aimed at? He has accused the members or this side of women.

"Is there a saw-off between you and the members on this side of women wine and graft. Who is suspected? "Emphatically no. Why should there The premier, examining the Bourassa resolution in detail, declared that there was no occasion to investigate Messrs. Fowler, Foster, Lefurgey and Bennett. All the facts had no doubt been brought out before the insurance commission. The findings of that ance commission. The findings of that the results of the results of Foster Sees Conspiracy. Hon, Geo. E. Foster declared that upon this debate it would not be ap-propriate for him to discuss the insurance commission and the testimony taken before it, but he desired to re cord his heartfelt conviction that under shadow of that commission ther had been carried out the most dia had been carried out the most diabolical conspiracy ever formed to asperse, and if possible, to destroy a political opponent. This government had deliberately used that commission to attempt to get him out of the way. Mr. Shepley and Mr. Tilley had been instructed to scour the country afor evidence. Boasts were made that "Foster would be muzzled." The whole affair had been worked as a Liberal party contrivance by the minister of justice. It was not until Sir Charles Dilke's conduct had become a public scandal that Mr. Gladstone had acted. It was only yesterday he had heard the first word of this but was he to deal in rumor and scandal? If Mr. Bourassa had any charge to make, let him make it and it would be investigated if it kept parliament sitting for three months. But in the name of the disister of justice.

As to his statements that he would appeal to a higher tribunal, Mr. Foster admitted that he had made that statement in Toronto, but it was before he knew about royal insurance commissions, one of which had turned out to be the most arbitrary tribunal imaginable. The tribunal would bunal imaginable. The tribunal would not allow representation by counsel, but frequently whispered to Mr. Shep-ley the questions they wished to put to a witness. He would appeal to the verdict of the people and take his bring this matter forward as a quesown time to do it.

Private character or lack of it was a matter of parliamentary concern when the person went before the peo-ple for election. But it was a deli-cate thing to regulate the private character of any member and do it by a parliamentary partisan commit-tee. There was a good deal of think-ing and speaking going on. It was a hopeful sign when people were tak-ing notice of these things and insist-ing upon the brightest parliament that could be obtained.

Mr. Foster, dealing with Mr. Carvell's speech, declared that he had not the sole control, nor the influence But he was also the guardian of the honor of his cabinet and he could go to the governor general and ask the to direct the investments of the Foresters' funds. People interested had been led dismissed of any minister. Mr. Bor-den was not insinuating that any such believe that he had squandered funds that should go to the widow and orcase had arisen. He only desired to state his view of the prime minister's responsibility. Sir Wilfrid had talked about Mr. Bourassa's resolution calling for a political inquisition. But it would not be half so cruel as the commission appointed to pry into the private affairs of Mr. Foster. A commission that deried him counsel, that degenerated into a political inquisition phan. Such accusations had been made, but it was poor party warfare.

After short speeches by Mr. Devlin (Wright) and McCarthy (Simcoe). Mr. Ross again raised the point that the resolution was in part out of in that it introduced a statement, which he had denied. Dr. Sproule supported this view, and it was sustained by Mr. Speaker's ruling that Mr. Bourassa had no right to repeat in a resolution a statement denied by an hon, member any more than he could refuse in debate to account an hon member's word.

Mr. Borden evidently sprung a surprise upon the government when he announced in closing that, while was not adopted. I wishing that the resolution of Mr. courted investigation. MOVES FOR COMMITTEE TO PROBE SCANDAL TALK

It is to be inferred from this that Mr. Foster does not know quite where Mr. the man who is making things unco Foster does not know quite where Mr. Bourassa may land, and that he does not like the uncertainty. Still he could hardly expect Mr. Bourassa to be more explicit, when all he has before him are the insinuations of Mr. Foster's colleagues, both in western land deals and in the Conservative parliamentary

Mr. Fowler's threat was frankly intended to act as a lightning rod to keep dangerous enquiries away from the very land deals in which Mr. Foster was concerned, and, consequently, it is not surprising that Mr. Foster has his prejudices against these "leaps in the dark," especially when Mr. Bourassa states with brutal frankness that he intends to refer to the comments of the insurance commissioners' report regarding Mr. Foster and his friends, as well as to the "women, wine and graft" insinuations of Mr. Fowler. It is reassuring to find Mr. Borden indignant over the report that there is an understanding regarding this matter between the two sides of the house. It is a report which should arouse his indignation. Collusion between the two parties to suppress such a scandal would be as degrading a hangain as Mr. Fowler's threat was frankly inparties to suppress such a scanda would be as degrading a bangain as our politics have ever witnessed.

But it is possible for there to be ex-cellent "team work" by a combination of the two parties toward this end, without any previous "understanding," and that will be quite as damning in the eyes of the country. The present parliament of Canada has not won for parliament of Canada has not well to itself as yet a very high place in the esteem of the people.

It formed a political "trust" to increase the pay of its own members, and brazenly defied public opinion agains it the that public opinion was very plainly and very fully expressed.

It has put upon the statute books A Leap in the Dark.—The preface to very few progressive measures, and the "woman, wine and graft" debate, these only under heavy outside presAMUSEMENTS.
