Passengers give an unqualified denial to the report that the captain and pilot were drunk. When the accident occurred the skipper was enjoying refreshment after his turn on watch, but the moment the shock came he rushed up the stairs two steps at a time, and all agree that on the bridge until the noble creft disinguaged Deny Officers Were Drunk. bridge until the noble craft disappeared almost from under his feet, he was cool, collected and deliberate in giving his orders, attributes never associated with a drunken man. The same may be said of

it. This was done without the captain's knowledge; and, with the lack of that knowledge, the captain was excusable for thinking the vessel could float for several hours. It was established that if the pilot had carried out his intention, ne could have gotten her on the beach without could have gotten her on the beach without
