powered with emotion, indeed, time before he sufficiently recovered from the shock the intelligence gave him to realize the horrible and unusual nature of the of-fence. When however fence. When, however, its full truth flashed upon him, he lost no time in taking hasned upon inm, he tost no time in taking measures to have the guilty punished. Seizing his walking came and setting his peaked cap firmly on his head, he made directly for the Police Station, and there, in the still watches of the night, beneath the

which he required him to perform; cautioned him against anowing use signifest intimation of his mission to escape, lest his plans should be frustrated, and with his blessing for the success of his expedition, had him depart. Little widow-woisen of Carlesian depart. Little with the widow-woisen of Carlesian with the condition of the property of the glorious or both and the property hills on that peaceful Sunday majoring, how soon their plants would be destroyed and their little highlines would be destroyed and their little house invaded by the merciless minimes of the law. We need dwell no longer on the reprise results of that memorable day. Suffice it to say that

When Ireland and ther own parliament on of the first questions to which the Irish leaders turned their attention was the protection of her home industries by a judicious protective traiff. And one of the greatest grisyances of which the Irish have had to the traiff. And one of the greatest grisyances of which the Irish have had to complain is that the union with England destroyed this protection of the right in Ireland are not free traders. First first in Ireland are not free traders. Far from it. The Grit Party, if in Ireland, would get no support at all.
