Bread pudding and prunes—the two nightmares of the boarding house table, according to comic papers—can be made into a very palatable descent by the following process: Dry the bread in the oven or toast until it is sufficiently hard enough to grate. Take raw prunes, remove pits and chop prunes. Mix in equal proportions put in whites and yolk of eggs (allowing one for every three portions), besten up well separately. Sugar to taste, flavor the peel of half a lemon. Add this, as well as juice of the same, and bake pudding one-half hour. Serve plain, or with any pudding sauce preferred.

Remedy for blackheads contributed by a correspondent: Take a tooth-brush, a very soft one, if you have no face scrubbing brush, and rub it on a cake of soap. First let the face be heated with toweis wrung out in hot water. Now use the little brush upon the afflicted spot, quite briskly. Next let a water be prepared and have the face well cleaned in it. Anoint with bensoinated lard.

In massaging the wrinkles go round and round in a rotary motion, not hard, but gently, and as though you were significantly the peel of half a lemon. Add this, as well as juice of the same, and bake pudding one-half hour. Serve plain, or with any pudding sauce preferred.

FREDERICTON NEWS.

FREDERICTON, N. B., July 8.—Mr. Hannah, the newly elected president of King's College, Windsor, made a most favorable impression upon the Synod at its session just closed. Mr. Hannah has already stirred up much enthusiasm among the friends of the institution and the sentiment is quite institution and the sentiment is quite general that if the new president cannot make a success of the college no one else can. As a speaker, Mr. Hannah is certainly of the very first rank, and as a scholar his remarks show him to be an exceptionally brilliant man. He has the greatest confidence in his ability to make a success of King's. In the few remarks that he made last evening to the new alumni branch of the college, he gave evidence that he had made a thorough study of the task before him, and that he had lost no time in forming plans to bring the university more in touch with the people.

At the end of this month Mr. Hannah intends visiting the Rev. Canon Richardson of St. John, and with the permission of the rector of Trinity, intends making that parish his headquarters for starting his campaign in this province. His intention is to go among the people and talk particularly with the business men and disclose to them his ideas. He feels confident of having at least eighteen students in the opening of the college in the fall, but says that he will gain what he seeks.

The question of coadjutor did not materialize at the present session of the report of the Amherst Daily. News, arrived tonight on a visit to long and the seeks.

This turned out to be the case and so ne of those who were suspected of being prime movers in the proposed object took an entirely different tack. The strongest argument that has been put forward in support of a coadjutor has been the continued ill health of the present head of the church and his inability on that account to visit his parishioners. This argument got more and more knocked in the head as the Synod continued in session, for his lordship, instead of showing any signs of illness, disclosed himself as a man enjoying the best of health and having undaunted energy. This was plasing to the Synod and the question of coadjutor gradually dropped. That however, the idea at one time was a specific to the case and some of coadjutor gradually dropped. That however, the idea at one time was a specific to the case and states raising money orders from small amounts to large figures.
