on the Smith's Creek road about half a mile, where Lt. Col. Vince constructed a bridge over the Smith's Creek stream about fiff y yards below the bighway bridge. The work of Col. Vince and his men was much admired. The cotonel, with his second in command, Capt. Tompkins, and twenty-four men, in one and a half hours built a bridge about 25 feet span to carry infantry. The only tools used were axe, saw and auger, rot a nail or spike entering into the construction. It may be mentioned struction. It may be mentioned construction. It may be mentioned that the time allowed in the regulations for building a bridge of this size and character is four hours.

While the engineers were erecting the bridge a constant firing of blank cartridge was kept up by the two Field Batteries and a half battalion of infantry. On completion of the bridge it was crossed by three battalions of infantry, who then attacked the hill in front, supposed to be occupied by the enemy, which was represented by Capt Chipman's company of the first Battalion.

In the meantime the two field batteries, accompanied by a battalion of eries, accompanied by a battalion of teries, accompanied by a battalion of infantry, had advanced along the Smith's Creek road about half a mile, entered a field on the left and commenced firing in earnest at targets erected about three-quarters of a mile away on the hillside, supposed to be the enemy. Eighty shots, were fired by the two batteries. The whistling of the shells through the air and their explosion at the targets gave the spec-5

On Saturday afternoon John Scho-field of Carsonville lost his barn by fire, which was caused by cinders blown from a burning forest. All his crop of hay and grain, together with many other things stored in the barn, were destroyed. The loss is a heavy one, and particularly so, there being no insuranc Four-footed animals are not legally allowed to run uncontrolled in this county; and, as a consequence, fences along the highway have been largely dispensed with. The prolonged dry weather has quite parched the pastures, so that cows and other beasts have in some cases been turned into the meadows to feed. This would be all right if the animals would remain feeding on the property of the parties to whom they belong. But to the great annoyance always, and much to the injury often, of other people, this is not the case. If a man decide to have his stock enjoy the after-feed, he should herd them and not allow them to roam at will, lest his neighbors patience be subjected to too severe a trial.
