"The matter which this page contains selected from various sources; and we think, to any intelligent farmer or householder, of this simple and easy mode of curing the year, will be worth several times the price of the paper." IF MOTHER WOULD LISTEN. If mother would listen to me, d. She would freshen that faded face. She would sometimes take a rest. And sometimes a trip to town. And it shouldn't be all for the fun, and the cheer, and the With the patient droop, and the mouth. And the "Mother has had her share. True, mother has had her share. When you were her babies, and she had stepped about the farm-house. As busy as a bee. When she rocked you all to sleep. And sent you all to school. And wore herself out, and did you. And lived by the Golden Rule. And so your turn has come, dear. Her hair is growing white, and her eyes are gaining the light. She looks beyond the night. One of these days in the morning. Mother will not be here. She will fade away into silence. The mother so true and dear. Then, what will you do in the day? And what in the gloaming dim? And father, tired and lonesome. Pray, what will you do for him? If you want to keep your hearts from growing old, you must make her rest to-day. Must give her a share in the fun. And draw her into the play. And if mother would listen to me, she'd buy her a gown of silk, With buttons of royal velvet, And ruffles as white as milk. And she'd let you do the trotting. While she sat still in her chair. Her mother should have it through. It strikes me isn't fair. - Margaret E. S. THE Canning Season. The canning season is here, a words of advice may not come amiss on this subject. The best time to canning is in the early morning. 3 o'clock in the afternoon rather than the hot of the day. Select the best of the fruit. Fruit that is long on the tree, bush or vine is better for preserving. In the case of fruit as well as some pickles, think better to squeeze out the acid and get rid of as much as possible the following day, and the down into jelly. This provides and is a great relief to a woman's daily routine of work is so difficult to attend to that she can hardly spare for the canning season. There are many preserves, fruit apples and peaches, that are better by standing over night, covered with weight of sugar after they are prepared for preserving. The fruit which has the juices of the fruit coming out in the morning, and when this syrup is clarified and the fruit is cooked in it, the result is a very rich and delicious preserve, which has not weakened in flavor as preserves are by water. Fruit cannot be put for canning in this way, as a draw of sugar is necessary to draw out the juices which the fruit should have. As a jar of fruit is peeled should be put in the jar and packed with syrup, and when the boiler intended for them, to the cans the requisite time. Pickles are very easily prepared as a process, and many people think this the best way, as it is the main portion of pickling water. Sweet pickles and manna pickles cannot be prepared in this way, but must be done by the slow method of cooking them in the pot. Marrow which form a group of some of the best table delicacies, are fully as if the fruit is peeled, chopped in mixed with the weight of sugar before they are cooked. Thus is divided between two days. It is best to put in a good housekeeper do her work quietly, without allowing herself into a flurry of excitement at the moment. Wornout nerves and ill strength are ill spent in any kind of art, and especially in canning. It is better to have a few little ones on black apples winter long, monotonous as they than to ruin one's health with the heat of summer in the preparation of delicacies which, however desirable, are not essential. Children in Summer. The heat of summer is especially to little children. If they have been in regular habits, their food and sleep at stated periods, and their training will now be, on the contrary, he has been up without method or order, it is a grievous struggle for him to pass the summer. A well-trained child under a year old, should be fed at regular hours, from six o'clock in the morning till six in the evening. At night, he should be fed at 10 and under ordinary circumstances will sleep till morning, though circumstances may require more than between 10 and 6. A healthy baby always rises in the morning, and in summer he is dressed at once and taken out to cool fresh air, to frolic about himself with the young birds and all the frolic things which come with the heat of the day. That you can give to a child in this early morning. He is vigorously hungry when he awakes, as soon as this hunger is satisfied, he goes into the open air, where he rises with the baby, and the heat of the day, which is usually the best time for the daily bath, is bathed and fed at 10 o'clock, he will usually sleep his 12 o'clock meal till 2.
