BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

THEIR INFLUENCE ON LONDON SOCIETY.

(From the London Saturday Journal.)

"The tendency of the present day is the laxity of the conversation permitted by many ladies of society in their male friends. This evil has been of very rapid growth and has spread in many cases from the married women even to the girls, who think they can thus make themselves as agreeable to the men as their successful rivals. This to a great extent, is attributable to the rage for beautiful women which is denominated London society, as well as elsewhere throughout the world. A woman, if she is extremely lovely, can always get an introduction and is sure to be a star in society. This rage for beauty has been a great bane in London society for a long time, and has been a great source of annoyance to many who felt themselves shunned and neglected by the men in favor of fashionable beauties. Society has lately advanced a step further, and the beauties of London societies, whose faces are their fortunes, are now becoming more numerous. Many women with brilliant minds and goddess-like forms have been neglected and passed by unnoticed for the woman who could only claim a beautiful face. Most women of intellect and fine figure have felt these charms to be sufficient and have neglected their faces. The result has been an army of women with hideous faces caused by blotches, redness, roughness of the skin, pimples, disgusting blackheads, liver spots, and other imperfections which the professional beauty has with such acumen been careful to either cure or prevent. Mrs. Langtry, Adelina Patti, Clara Louise Kellogg, Mrs. James Brown Porter, Mme. Mojeska, Fanny Davenport, and Helen Dauray thoughtfully understand the importance among woman's attractions of a perfect complexion. They have tried every imaginable remedy, and have unanimously agreed on one—the one used by all the professional beauties. It is a well-known fact to every thoughtful woman that any imperfection on the face suggests uncleanness to men, and honest confessions made by men of the world reveal the fact that they have been absolutely disgusted with women because of imperfections on their faces. NOTE.—The Recamier Preparations are the remedies referred to in the above article.

What the Recamier Preparations are and why they are to be Used. Recamier Cream, which is first of these world famous preparations, is made from the recipe used by Julie Recamier. It is not a cosmetic, but an emollient to be applied at night just before retiring, and to be removed in the morning by bathing freely. It will remove tan and sunburn, pimples, red spots or blotches, and make your face smooth and as smooth as white and as soft as an infant's. Recamier Balm is a beautiful, pure and simple. It is not a whitewash, and unlike most liquids Recamier Balm is exceedingly beneficial and is absolutely imperceptible except in the delicate freshness and youthfulness which it imparts to the skin. Recamier Lotion will remove freckles and moth patches; is soothing and efficacious for any irritation of the cuticle, and is the most delightful of washes for removing the dust from the face after travelling, and is also invaluable to gentlemen to be used after shaving. Recamier Powder is in three shades, white, flesh and cream. It is the finest powder ever manufactured, and is delightful in the nursery, for gentlemen after shaving and for the toilet generally. Recamier Soap is a perfectly pure article, guaranteed free from animal fat. This soap contains many of the healing ingredients used in compounding Recamier Cream and Lotion. The Recamier Toilet Preparations are positively free from all injurious ingredients, and contain neither Lead, Bismuth nor Arsenic, as attested to after a searching analysis by such eminent scientists as HENRY A. MOTT, Ph. D., LL. D., Member of the London, Paris, Berlin and American Chemical Societies. THOS. B. STILLMAN, M. Sc., Ph. D., Professor of Chemistry of the Stevens Institute of Technology. PETER T. AUSTEN, Ph. D., F. C. S., Professor of General and Applied Chemistry, Rutgers College and New Jersey State Scientific School. If your druggist does not keep the Recamier Preparations, refuse substitutes. Let him order for you, or order yourself from either of the Canadian offices of the Recamier Manufacturing Company, 374 and 376 St. Paul street, Montreal, or 50 Wellington street E., Toronto. For sale in Canada at our regular New York prices: Recamier Cream, $1.50; Recamier Balm, $1.50; Recamier Lotion, $1.50; Recamier Soap, scented, 50c., unscented, 25c.; Recamier Powder, large boxes, $1.00; small boxes, 50c.

THE WORLD OF BOOKS.

A visit to any of the first-class bookstores now-a-days insensibly brings to one's mind the words of Solomon, the wise: "Of the making of many books there is no end"; for, "glance" over the shelves and tables when you will, they are always piled with new books. I confess it is a puzzle to me who writes them all. I always come out of a bookstore with my respect for humanity largely increased, and a firm conviction that the world of literature is no longer an oligarchy, but rather a republic. In addition to the sheaves of new books that come out each week, there seem to be periodical revivals of others not so new. Just at present Little Lord Fauntleroy is having a great run, a sort of "second run," like the Restigouche salmon, and you see the book everywhere. Either the popularity of the play, or more likely the sad news of the fatal illness of the poor little lad who served his adoring mother as a model for the little lord, has once more brought Mrs. Burnett's charming story into prominence. Another recently received book is Bret Harte's wonderful, haunting, aggravating story, or study rather, The Argonauts of North Liberty, and if anybody who reads PROGRESS, and the "World of Books," neglected reading about the Argonauts when they first appeared, let him repair that early error at once, and spend twenty-five cents for a copy. It is a curious illustration of the versatile power possessed by its author; for though written by a humorist, there is so little humor in the book, and that little is of the grim kind that you have to look for, and find at last under a crust of hard, vivid facts. I think the description of the North Liberty Second Presbyterian church and its worshippers during service, is the finest bit of realistic writing I ever read; the chill of the damp, cold, building, and the bald dreary religion it taught creeps into one's blood, as they read it, and freezes the vital fluid in one's veins.

The shivering gas jets lit up the austere pallor of the bare walls, and the hollow, shell-like sweep of colorless vacancy behind the cold communion table. The chill of despair and powerless renunciation was in the air, untempered by any glow from the sealed airtight stove, that seemed only to bring out a lukewarm exhalation of wet clothes, and cheaply dyed umbrellas. Nor did the presence of the worshippers themselves, impart any life to the dreary apartment. Scattered throughout the white pews, in dull shapeless neutral blotches, rigidly separated from each other, they seemed only to accent the colorless church and the emptiness of all things. A few children, who had huddled together for warmth in one of the back benches, and who had become glutinous and adhesive through moisture, were laboriously drawn out, and painfully picked apart by a watchful deacon. Then— The congregation rose, and began slowly to file into the aisle. For a moment they mingled; there was a silent grasping of damp woolen mittens, and cold hand gloves, and the whispered interchange of such other names, with the prefix of "brother," or "sister," and an utter absence of fraternal geniality, and then the meeting slowly dispersed.

Poor! poor, Brete Harte! Somewhere, at some time in his life, he has been at a meeting like that, or he could never have described it so feelingly. And then his heroine, the saintly, puritanical Joan Blandford, who seems created to prove how much truth there is in the line, "Friends can look like angels fair." We don't like Joan as a saint; we can't! we can only shudder and say, "If that's what saints are like, not any in mine, thank you, I don't care for luxuries." All our sympathies are with poor warm-hearted Edward Blandford, who was condemned to live with this frozen lump of perfection, and to love her too, till the scales are forcibly torn from his eyes by seeing her one evening clasped to the heart of his chosen friend, who to do him justice, is ignorant of her identity, and believes her to be a charming young girl whom he has fallen in love with and wants to marry.

We see Mrs. Blandford first seated "quietly before a large, round, shining center table, whose sterile emptiness was relieved only by a shaded lamp and a large black and gilt open volume. A single picture on the opposite wall—the portrait of an elderly gentleman stiffened over a corresponding volume, which he held in invincible mortmain in his rigid hand, and evidently defied posterity to take it from him, seemed to offer a not ungenial companionship. Yet the greenish light of the shade fell upon a young and pretty face." We see her last seated in the choir of that same Second Presbyterian church, crowned with a halo of vanity, and also a new spring bonnet, serene, peaceful, saintly, looking more like one of Raphael's Madonnas than a woman who had ruined two honest men's lives, been divorced from one and deserted another, and who had in a general and nineteenth century way wrought as much harm by her hypocrisy as Lucrecia Borgia did by her little weakness for poisoning.

If you have read it, read it again, and if you have not, why, then, I envy you the pleasure you have before you. GEOFFREY CUTBERT STRANGE. June. When the clover is deep in the orchard, And the grass waves fresh and free; When the strawberry sweet in sunny retreat, Waits for the robin or me; When the bobolink down in the meadow Is singing his rollicking song; When skies are blue and clouds are few, And the days are happy and long; When the butterfly wooes the wild-rose, And everything seems in time; Oh, then you may hear the clock of the year Striking the hour of June! —Emma C. Dowd in Youth's Companion.

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective. "In the summer of 1861 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured, and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Luce, Lieut. Col. 26th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

Ayer's Pills
