An Interesting Fact. Just under the dome of St. Peter's Church, in front of the tomb of the saint, and surrounded by ever-burning lamps, is a recess, in which is a kneeling statue by Canova of Pope Pius VI. Of all the stately sculptures in the great basilica none equals this in quiet grace and the sublimity of its repose. The Pope is represented in his pontifical robes, his hands clasped and his face partially upturned in prayer. Pius IX. is Poi known to have a special admiration for this mortuary monument, and, it is said in to specially present the claims of Rome, has given orders that after his death a similar kneeling statue of himself shall be sculptured and placed in a correspond ing position in his favorite church the basilica of Santa Maria Maggiore, on the other side of the Tiber.
