properly boiled it properly pared or washed, and placed in water that has just reached the boiling point. The water should again be brought to boiling. This requires from 15 minutes to half as hour, according to the size of the potato. Then drain the dish of water, take it to the air, shake it up and down a minute, and put if on the coolest part of the stove. This is to dry the potatoes and keep them from being sogry.

"Now, with a cold boiled potato you can do almost anything. A very tasteful dish is made by cutting the remnants of potatoes into small slices and arranging them on a hot skillet, greased first with lard and then with a little butter. This makes saute potatoes, but it is easy to spoil them. Nothing can be browned unless it has a bot, greasy surface to brown it, and crisp, golden brown potatoes can be head if too many are put in the skillet aft once. And of course they must have salt and pepper.

"Cold potatoes chopped into dice, fried in the same way with a little more butter and some shallote and parsley chopped fine and mixed with the potato make lyonnaise. The fried potato is not greasy, indigestible or unhealthy. Potatoe should be fried in boiling fat—that is, sweet, white lard melted, and carefully drained. For this use a deep wire ladle, or a spoon in the hands of an experienced cook and a platter or pan lined with the kind of coarse brown paper that is used for wrapping pickages by butchers or bakers. This careful draining makes the difference between an unwholesome greasy dish and a wholesome, dainty and artistic one. The fried potatoe is needed. Whe's Are the Clothes?

Is a wife's clothing, which she has purchased with her husband's money, the property of the husband or the wife! This question has been raised in a London polyes court by a Mrs. Watte, who is living apart from her husband under a separation order obtained by her. It is 'm' what Mr. Watts has retained in his kering a large amount of clothing which his wife had purchased with money he gave her for the purpose. Mrs. Watt's lawyer contended that the property in the money passed from the husband when he handed it to the wife, and thus the articles which she purchased thereupon became part of her separate, but Mr. Watts and his legaladvisors refused to accept this view of the case.

Unfortunately this delicate question was not set led. The case was withdrawn upon the discovery that the articles were worth more than £15, which is the limit of the magistrate's jurisdiction. Proceedings are to be resumed in another form, however, and Canadian as well as English wives will watch the result with interest.

New York Ideas,

The newest flounce is from two to six inches wide, doubled, bias and cut to fit the skirt so that it sets close at the upper edge and flares below.

Lining a skirt with canvas even half-way up to make it flare ought not to be countenanced; it makes it too heavy forhealth and causes the outside to wrinkle. Skirts must escape the ground, as the desire to sweep the streets with demitrains has vanished, beyond recall, it is to be hoped.
