A London housewife who declared war this week on the Soviet bloc announced last night that "It's time someone put those pinkoes in their place".

Margaret Hilda Thatcher, 53, formerly known by the twin epithets of "milk snatcher" and "union basher" was quick to back up her terse comments. Armed with an umbrella and fierce stilettos, Thatcher climbed the Berlin Wall while alarmed sentries shuddered with fear, amidst horrified cries of "mein gott, ist das Eva Braun?"

As Soviet tanks retreated in some confusion, the small figure, clad in paratroop regalia and a headscarf taunted the soldiers as she swung her handbag high in the air crying "Take that you bounders!"

Reports from Moscow suggest that President Brezhnev suffered an apoplectic seizure upon hearing the news. Close aides revealed that the ailing leader fainted into his vodka-laced corn flakes, his personal copy of Pravda clutched tightly in his third chin.

Thatcher's actions have been supported widely throughout the civilized world. In South Africa, a petition of support was collected from the League To Wipe Out Jewish-Bolshevik Scum and a pair of nylon stockings were sent on to Mrs. Thatcher as a gesture of support.

In Washington, Senator Barry Goldwater, in a singularly moving and eloquent speech which brought tears to the eyes of many in the packed House this afternoon, stated "That's right-on lady. Go get them goddamsonofabitches and flail the shit right out their asses". In Ottawa, an ashen-faced Joe Clark could only mutter "This was nevertheless only a possibility given the fact that the aforementioned could only have occurred within a given probability of circumstance", a comment which clearly had the backing of the whole Commons (shouts of "What the hell is he talking about?" notwithstanding).

As Mrs. Thatcher digs her trench for a prolonged Winter campaign informed observers believe that her morale remains high, despite occasional complaints such as the East Germans "make an awful cup of tea" and that the Poles "are riff-raff, the most uncultured bunch of slobs I have never invited to a soiree at the Ritz". Soviet citizens are said to be fleeing en-masse through Siberia as the Iron Maiden advances towards the Soviet border.

Back in their Chelsea home, husband Dennis Thatcher, a retired oil executive, stayed calm in the face of adversity and the panic caused throughout Eastern and Western Europe by his wife's bloody assault on the Bolshevik hordes. Sitting in his local pub, the Piss Pot, with a pint of bitter in one hand and a cigar in the other, he told our special correspondent: "I don't give a union steward's pay cheque what she does, as long as she's back in time to cook my bloody supper. I'm sick of eating fish and chips!" With that, he belched loudly, fell over a chair and staggered to the bar for a refill.

Financially speaking... we're here to screw you!

For some students, getting together enough money to meet the costs of post-secondary education is difficult... and we're here to make it even harder! If you've got financial problems, the Students Finance Board wants to ensure that they become permanent... through our famous system of loans, grants, scholarships, fellowships and bursaries.

If you think we're going to let our universities be over-run by a bunch of poor people, you're sadly mistaken. Quite frankly, unless your family has an income of at least $30,000 we're not interested in helping you.

What this province needs is more people willing to get out and work at low paying unskilled jobs, not more uppity pinko artsy fartsies.

If you're poor and still want to try, go right ahead... but don't say we didn't warn you. For further information on how to get the financial beating of your life, please contact:
