

January 8, 1940

My dear Jennie:

I have just received the additional napkins, for which I thank you most warmly. You really should not have gone to so much trouble, nor to so great an expense on my account. I know something about the cost of linen, because, of late, I have had to make good some deficiencies in that direction. I can assure you the napkins are exceptionally welcome.

I hope that you and Jean, and the other members of the family, are not beginning the New Year by over-doing. That would be the most unfortunate of all mistakes. Take it easy, and save your energy all you possibly can. It is the reserve one has that is going to be worth most from now on. The capacity to endure as well as to enjoy is increased by not being overtired.

With fondest love to all,

Mrs. H. M. Lay,
"Boulderfel",
Barrie, Ontario.
