

ledged as the rule of faith and practice—to love one another and live in peace was the first duty, and forgiveness of injuries began to take the place of ancient rivalries and jealousies.

In the old time, before the reign of English law, when one of a chief's family died one or more slaves were put to death to attend him in the spirit land, now all were recognized as brothers, and the old superstitious dread of death gave place to glad anticipation of the rest and glory of heaven.

Published by the
WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY of the Methodist Church, Canada,
Room 20, Wesley Buildings,
Toronto, Ont.

Price, 1 cent each; 10 cents a dozen.