

Lump Jaw

The first remedy to cure Lump Jaw was

Fleming's Lump Jaw Cure

and it remains today the standard treatment, with years of success back of it, known to be a cure and guaranteed to cure. Don't experiment with substitutes or imitations. Use it, no matter how old or bad the case or what else you may have tried—your money back if Fleming's Lump Jaw Cure ever fails. Our fair plan of selling, together with exhaustive information on Lump Jaw and its treatment, is given in Fleming's Vest-Pocket Veterinary Adviser.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Miscellaneous.

SEVEN POULTRY CONUNDRUMS

- (a) Give the description, in full, of a standard-bred Barred Plymouth Rock cockerel; (b) B. P. R. pullet.
- Will it improve show birds to be fed in crates the same as fattening chicks?
- Will it injure them for breeding purposes?
- Give the best method for fitting Barred Rocks for exhibition.
- Do ducks fatten better if crated the same as chicks?
- Where can crate-fattened chicks be sold for more than yard-fattened ones, and what is the difference in the prices?
- Give the standard weight of (a) Pekin male, (b) female ducks.

A SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—1. The answer to this will be found in the "Standard of Perfection." It will cost you $1.50, but is of much value to breeders of poultry. In fact, no poultryman's library is complete without it. Order through "The Farmer's Advocate."

2. If fed judiciously, it might put a bird in better condition, though birds in such close quarters may damage their wing and tail feathers.

3. Yes.

4. This is a business in itself, and can be learned best by watching others and by doing it. No two exhibitors fit alike.

5. No; I have never been able to get satisfactory results from feeding ducks in crates.

6. Poultry commission men will pay more for a well crate-fattened chick than one that is not. The difference may run from 1c. to 10c., or more, per lb., depending on the trade he has. Some dealers will not take chicks that are not crate-fed, and most prefer them.

7. Adult—Male, 8 lbs.; female, 7 lbs. Young—Male, 7 lbs.; female, 6 lbs.

YOUNG TURKEYS DYING.

Our young turkeys are dying off with some disease of the head—the half-grown ones as well as the younger ones. The trouble seems to be all in their heads. They seem to be able to swallow their food, but cannot chirp at all. Their heads swell, and they seem to gasp for breath; and, with some the eyes seem to turn out. The disease seems to spread through the flock. Is there any help for them?

READER.

Ans.—This swelling of the head around the eye denotes roup. This starts, first, from a cold unless the flock have mixed with another clutch suffering from same disease, or are running over range which has previously been used by a diseased flock. Many years ago, I lost a great number through trying to cure them with drugs, and I now hold it in check so well by killing and burying afflicted specimens that I have only had to chop the head off one poult the past two years. The first symptoms is a slight "puff" between the eye and nostril. This is the indication of a slight cold, and, if watched, will sometimes pass away in two days. If it does not leave in that time, I practice cutting off the head and burying, no matter how valuable the bird. In order to detect this "puff," it requires closer observation on the part of the attendant than is usually given. I have frequently noticed it in neighbors' flocks ten days or two weeks before they could see anything wrong, and I suspect in this case that the most of the poult dying have been afflicted at least a month. However, the gasping for breath is not a symptom of roup in the early stage, and, if I remember correctly, not at any stage. Consequently, I would advise cutting open the windpipe of a dead bird, and examine for small, reddish-colored worms. If found, this would indicate gapes, which are prevalent in many localities this season. Placing myself in "Reader's" position, I would immediately kill every poult which showed signs of disease, and bury deeply. Of course, I have heard of many cures for "roup," and I have also known of a few cases where recovery took place without any treatment, but the risk of transmitting it to other healthy birds is altogether too great to keep them upon the place.

FAIRVIEW HERD is the place to buy your next bull. I can furnish you with a bull sired by our great herd bull, PONTIAC KORNDYKE, who has 19 daughters in the last year's report that made official records from 13 pounds at less than two years old to over 314 pounds at four years, and the whole number averaged over 41% fat. No other bull in the world has ever made such a showing in one year. I have just tested another of his daughters that made 26.40 pounds butter in seven days with second calf. I have over 50 cows and heifers in calf to him. Come and look my herd over before making your selections elsewhere. E. H. DOLAR, Hevelton, St. Law. Co., N. Y., near Prescott.
