FOR CHILDREN

Dec. 7.—Princess de Sagan, Anna Gould, has called in the morning, and she has been very kind to deny the false statements that she had her children with neglect. Interview Prince Helle de Sagan, and said he was of the boys. He then told she could have her say. "I state frankly," she began, "I do not approve entirely of the children being educated, the laws of France, the father divorced, has control of the children. Castellane still has the right to this matter, with the result of older boys are being sent to school. I believe in it. I think that until the children more attention should be paid to their physical health, to play and healthy exercise. The oldest will be 12 in January, the youngest will be 11 this month. I believe in a well-known school, a well-known school, boys directed by priests, there is something against me. I know that the Castellane could make an objection. I will be in April. I have children they will be as Protestants," said Sagan here, firmly but smiling. "I married I gave up my wife's life. I was asked about the children, is to be raised Count Boni. The Marquis de Castellane, a statement as that," she said. "They hate me, they hate my family. They want to do all to disturb my happiness. I have been from the year after as I gave them presents, most on the morning of the states, while they kept the tried to make Count Boni happy. I did all I could to please for him. That is his own fault. Surprisingly, I was wide enough for me with my unhappiness, but I am very happy with children."

The little fellow apparently had no means of riding on trains and on the Maritime Express last night had started out to see the world. He got as far as Sackville by that train, where he was taken off, but when the midnight express along he climbed unnoticed aboard the blind baggage and rode to Moncton. The youngster steadfastly declined to talk when questioned by officers. He was taken to the police office where he was held until some particulars are secured.

GIRL'S STOCKING RIFLED FOR CASH

Bold, Bad Men Took Four Five Dollar
Bills From Miss Sparks at Detroit.

DETROIT, Dec. 7.—These burglar fellows have grown wise. Some of them have been fooled for a long time, but now they are equal to woman's wit. Not more so than the stocking, the perfectly safe hiding place for money, treasures and trinkets of every sort. At least not if the hold-up men who accosted Miss Blanche Sparks at Gratiot and Broadway late the other night, are merely typical men of the "pro-fish."

"When they grabbed her they 'didn't even hesitate,' after grabbing her purse. Suppressing her cries with threats of violence, their first move was to invade the sacred precincts of her stockings, and 'sure nuff,' there was the swag, neatly tucked away. Four crisp $5 bills that Miss Sparks intended sending to her mother were merely typical men of the 'pro-fish.'"

"Of course I squirmed and kicked," said Miss Sparks, who reported the robbery to the police. "But what good did it do when I had two men to combat? I always felt safe with my money in my stockings. I don't know where I'll go now."

They took her store of cash to the last cent, including $3 in change which she carried in a purse. It was necessary to forego the lunch which was on her way to procure when held up.
