

KIPLING IN CANADA

The Famous Writer Visits Canada After Fifteen Years—Speaks to Canadian Club at Winnipeg

Rudyard Kipling, the noted English poet, accompanied by Mrs. Kipling, passed through Regina on Thursday morning's train enroute to the coast. It is fifteen years since the famous poet visited this country and since that time, many changes have taken place. At Winnipeg, Mr. Kipling was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Canadian Club at which he delivered the following address in response to a toast.

Mr. President, gentlemen of the Canadian Club, fellow subjects. I am only a dealer in words, and you can scarcely wonder I can find no words speaking from the heart, no words to thank you for the honor you have done me. The experience to me is almost overwhelming. What Mr. Gordon has been good enough to say about such work as I have done, I can only hope that you will very kindly try to believe. But if anyone of you in his life has been called good he will perhaps recollect the thoughts that passed through his mind when he considered what he really was. To one portion of the indictment I plead guilty. I have, I confess it now, done my best for about twenty years to make all the men of sister nations within the empire interested in each other. Because I know that at heart all men are pretty much alike in that they have the same ambitions, the same aspirations, the same love, the same hate, and when all is said and done we have only each other to depend upon.

Through any good fortune any work of mine has helped to make the boys over the world a little bit interested in each other, then that is my reward. But I seem to have caught in the speech of Mr. Crowe a reference to snow. I explained, I assure you, the moment I landed at Quebec. I explained that if the lumber in the country was shovelled off in July, I pointed out that snow is unheard of all that was a mistake, for it was French oak. I have done everything I can. I do not wish to revive your dark past or our dark past. But fifteen years ago almost to a day, I was in Winnipeg. At that time the city was seriously considering whether she would be paved. But so far as I could gather from the inhabitants of the city, the men of that generation appeared, at that remote epoch snow used to fall within the city limits, and when it melted the streets were what I have heard called muddy. I left the city of Winnipeg discussing that problem chiefly in Main street, and I went away for fifteen years, which in the life of nations is equivalent to about fifteen minutes in the life of man. I came back and found Winnipeg of today a metropolis. This morning I do not think that I have been over more than sixteen or twenty miles of asphalt. I have looked at a small part of the portions of your city. I have seen all the fine buildings you have erected, looked over your conveniences for your trade, your institutions of which you are justly proud, and above all the institutions you have provided for the education of your children.

The vision that your old men saw fifteen years ago I saw translated today into stone and brick and concrete. The dreams your young men dream I expect are the ordinary effects of human life, and they in turn will give place to vaster and more far reaching works. This is a record of unsurpassed achievement, and my admiration for it is as keen as is my envy. I say envy because as you know I have spent many years of my life among men laboring with their brains and with the sweat of their bodies to build up new states, to make them firm, and to do the work of civilization. These things are not reached except by the hardest of toil, high courage, personal sacrifice and very often bitter disappointment. The mere buildings and the streets of a town do not tell the story to the outsider, but no man who has ever been present as I have at the building of a new city or the upbuilding of a new community, who has been at the birth of things any where can fall to be the story cried aloud by every building, by every store, and by every private residence he passes. Therefore my heart goes out to the city of your pride of your love because I know what lies behind the mere houses and stores and streets. I know the patience and sacrifices that went to the upbuilding of it, and will continue to go to its existence, and to all that its existence implies. But I found cause for deeper delight in other things than those you were good enough to show me today. I have realized here the existence of a spirit of assured nationhood, the spirit of a people contented, not to be another people, or imitators of another people, but contented to be themselves. That spirit of course existed fifteen years ago, but that spirit, as I remember, and I have not forgotten some of my walks and talks in the city, doubted a little, it found itself necessary to explain. I found another echo of that mood of mine here today. I could feel in the air, in the streets, by a thousand signs, here is a people in their own land, whose heart strings go down deep in the fabric of the land, the trustees of a nation. This is worth more than anything else, for there is no unflattering cross of a new people exposed to the idea of a weak or degraded nationhood. Neither commerce, not art, nor literature can make up for the loss of that spirit. The biggest city the world has ever seen is the effect of organized enterprise. With the national spirit the meanness of packing cases stacked together on the prairie can uphold a dominion or a continent. You are fortunate beyond most other communities, for your own labor, your own self-sacrifice has given you material property in overwhelming abundance. One is forced back to the old words—You stand on the threshold of an unbelievable future. No man can foresee or set limits to your destiny. But any man, even I, have a right to remind you, before I sit down, that to whom much has been given from them much shall be required.

CRIMINAL CAUGHT
Port Arthur, Oct. 4.—J. H. Davis, an escaped American criminal was brought to this city last night. The story of Davis is interesting. Four years ago he was sentenced to serve seven years in Cooke county penitentiary, Illinois, for grand larceny. After serving three years and ten months he was let out on parole. About one month ago he took passage from Duluth to Port Arthur on the steamer America. While on route he robbed a passenger on the boat and at the next stopping place of the steamer, a steep rock he left the boat. After being eagerly sought after he was arrested and locked up at Grand Portage. After two days he broke jail and started to walk across the country to Pigeon River lumber camps. Word was then wired to the police at Port Arthur. Officer Tharlow who knew the prisoner, started out to look for him along the Duluth extension of the C.N.R., and on Saturday afternoon last he located the prisoner on a trail about two miles from Silver Mountain. Prisoner stated that Sheriff Carhart and Constable Jacobs of Minnesota, had passed him several times on different roads, but he had eluded them. Davis is being held here, pending the arrival of Sheriff Carhart from Grand Portage, Minn., where he will be taken across the line.

HEAVY FLOODS IN FRANCE
Paris, Oct. 4.—The papers are filled with accounts of the immense destruction caused by floods in the department of Herault, to which the damage is practically confined, and which is estimated to amount to $4,000,000. The waters rose so rapidly in the valleys that people working in the vine yards were cut off and compelled to seek refuge in trees and on the tops of houses and walls. A number of bodies have been recovered in various parts of the departments mentioned, but the exact loss of life is unknown.

JAPANESE AT THE COAST
An English Writer, After Visiting the Country, Gives His Views on the Subject
H. Hamilton Fife, who has been writing a series of articles in the Daily Mail on his impressions in Canada, following an extended tour in this country, in a recent issue took up the question "the Japanese in British Columbia."

No one, he writes, who has recently visited Vancouver city can have been surprised at the news of the anti-Japanese riots which took place on Saturday evening. I met a British Columbian acquaintance on the Strand the other evening. His only comment was: "Wonder it hasn't happened before."

As one gets nearer to the Pacific coast of Canada one is struck by the number of Japanese employed on the railways, as miners and in the hotels. At Field, the station in the heart of the Rockies, where passengers dine hurriedly by snow-capped giants peering down on them, all the servants are Oriental, and most of them seem dignified. Eastern dress. It seems an outrage to hear hungry tourists call out "waiter!" to these mild eyed intelligent creatures, clad in rich and beautiful silk robes and endowed with the stately manners of a mandarin.

I had not been in Vancouver an hour before I realised how near the city is to the far east. Slanting eyebrows are as common as turned-up noses. The Mongol type of face, with its demure expression seeming to hint that "it could be an, if it would," meets one at every turn. In the hotel the lift-boys, the boot cleaners, the boys and the bell-boys who sit in the hall ways ready to run errands, were all Japanese. Several of them seemed to be recent arrivals, and could scarcely speak or understand any English. I noticed however, that most of the lift boys had books, over which they bent their shiny heads whenever they had a moment's leisure. I asked one of them to let me see what he was reading. With a pleasant grin and deferential eyebrows he showed me a Japanese-English phrase book. Slowly he turned the leaf to the seat he had a moment ago. No need to preach to these boys the value of knowledge. They made me feel ashamed of my school days. Boys like that are bound to get along.

What the British Columbians object to is their getting on in British Columbia. There are already several thousand of them in Vancouver; other thousands are scattered about the province; and more are being added every week. I see that during the riot a shipload of 300 came along side the wharf. If they were of the same type as the party with whom I crossed from Victoria to the mainland in June, I do not greatly wonder that the mob resented their arrival. My fellow passengers had been shipped to Victoria from Honolulu, where an active agency exists for encouraging Japanese immigration into Canada. They were by no means a prepossessing lot. Peasants, most of them, heavy limbed, heavy browed; quite a different type from the silky, polite, highly civilised Japanese one meets in Europe. Their features were cast in repellent, uncouth mould. Their tiny eyes, set in brown, sun-baked faces, gave them an animal look. Their hard voices chattered incessantly. It is easy to understand constantly stream of such immigrants settling themselves among British Columbians, whose affection for England is intense, and who are anxious about all things, that their splendid province, so richly endowed by nature shall remain a white man's country. A few years ago it was against the "Chinese danger" that the anti-Asiatic agitation on the Pacific coast was chiefly directed. As a result the Chinese exclusion act was passed and which now refuses admittance to Celestials unless they are in possession of £100. Now the people of Vancouver say they are worse off than before, for the Japanese are pouring in faster than ever the "Chinooks" did. So far as my own observations went, each of the Oriental races seemed to be hardworking and energetic. I investigated both the Japanese and Chinese quarters, quite separate districts, where they have their own dwellings apart, with the shops, places of entertainment and joss-houses. The Japanese seemed to be cleaner and more European. The narrow streets of the Chinese location, with their closely curtained windows, and the creepy feeling that unseen eyes were watching all the time, gave much more the suggestion of the east—its inscrutable features and strange, exotic life.

In one lane were 100 houses were crushed together so as to almost shut out the sky. I stood on the old boardwalk, high above the mud of the roadway, and listened to the haunting music of tom-toms from a lighted upper room. A high wailing voice gave the monotonous melody, while the tap-tap of the drums went on with mechanical precision. It was interesting to find a slice of China only a few hundred yards from the brightly lit and handsome thoroughfares of a completely English town. But as I sniffed the enervating perfume of a joss stick and saw the cringing, loose robed figures sit here and there on cat-like feet, I could not help sympathising with the changing of the Oriental. The country which admits him must also admit his habits and his point of view. The Chinese are valued as servants. The cooking at the hotel was so good that I inquired the nationality of the chef. He was a Chinik, had been there seventeen years. Of the Japanese as servants I heard no good word at all. Lying, grasping, impudent, indolent, untrustworthy—these are samples of the epithets applied to them. And as business men were equally disliked. "A Chinaman" said a Vancouver merchant to me, "will try to get the better of you in a bargain, but once it is struck he will fulfil it, whatever the cost." The Japanese trader cannot be relied upon to keep his engagements. I expect that was too sweeping a charge, just as I find it hard to believe that all Japanese servants are as black as they are painted. I could see that one cause of grievance against them was their quickness to seize every chance of demanding higher wages, though they will work for very little when there is no chance of getting more. Thus the employers in Vancouver dislike them because they push the cost of domestic labor up, while the white working men are infuriated with them for keeping the price of other kinds of labor down. The lieutenant governor of the province must therefore have been prepared for demonstrations when he refused to sanction a fresh exclusion measure directed equally against the Japanese and Chinese. There is no question about the heat of feeling on the subject. Only a grievance very near their own hearts could incense the easy-going, easeloving population of the Pacific, slope to the rioting point.

British Columbia and California have the same problem to puzzle over. Professor Goldwin Smith is almost certainly right when he predicts that "before many years there must be a supreme contest between Europeans and Asiatics for supremacy on the Pacific coast." How that contest will finish we cannot tell. One thing is certain, however, no good can be done by mob violence. However great the provocation, British Columbia has everything to gain by being patient. And let us in this country do all we can to help her by sending as many Britons as possible to the Canadian far west. If the province could be filled up with white people there would be no room for the Oriental. The Asiatic danger would become automatically settled.

Minard's Liniment Co., Ltd.
Sirs, I came across a bottle of your MINARD'S LINIMENT in the hands of one of the students at the University of Maryland, and he being so kind as to allow me to use it for a very bad strain, which I obtained in training for foot races, and to say that it helped me would be putting it very mildly, and I therefore ask if you would let me know one of your agents that is closest to Baltimore so that I may obtain some of it. Thanking you in advance I remain,

PROSECUTE C.P.R.
Edmonton, Oct. 2.—Attorney General Cross has announced that the C.P.R. will be prosecuted for operating freight trains at Wetaskiwin and Strathcona contrary to the provisions of the Lords' Day act. It is that this case will be more successful than the prosecution of the C.P.R. at Clareholm for a similar contravention of law a few months ago by which the appeal of the company against the judgement of a justice of the peace was allowed on a technicality that the attorney general had not personally given leave to prosecute. This circumstance will not be overlooked in the pending prosecution which will take place shortly.

FORWARD WORK ON C.P.R.
Sir Thos. Shaughnessy Speaks on Western Trade at C.P.R. Annual Meeting—Officers of the Company
Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, in the course of his remarks at the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the C.P.R. last Wednesday, in moving the adoption of the annual report, stated in referring to the crops in the Northwest that the backward spring had caused a shrinkage of 25 per cent. in the marketable nature of wheat compared with last season. There will, however, be a very considerable increase in the quantity of oats and other grains, so that with the higher prices of wheat, the farmers of western Canada will receive in aggregate quite as much for their products as they did last year.

Referring to the forward work on the different sections of the C.P.R., Sir Thomas said that unless the business of the country had a serious set back, and there was no present grounds for such an apprehension, the forward policy will proceed from year to year. In carrying out these plans, the shareholders will be asked to assist in the issue of balance of ordinary shares capital already authorized to be used as required. Speaking of the company's land asset, Sir Thomas stated that the 8,900,000 acres of the original grant which now remains unsold, will yield on an average price per acre considerably higher than heretofore realised. By the end of the present season 291 miles of canals will have been completed in the western section of the irrigation block. The cost of this work would be about $6.50 per acre. Sir Thomas believes that it will be possible to irrigate far larger tracts along their main line east of Calgary. There are now in the service of the company 74,000 officers and employees with a monthly pay roll of $3,700,000. Estimated on the ordinary basis of five persons to a family, these would represent 350,000 souls, or more than one-twentieth of the population of the Dominion, and if there be added the men in the rail and rolling mills, car and locomotive manufacturing and other industrial establishments who are engaged in the manufacture of material in large quantities for the purpose of the company, one fifteenth if not one twentieth of the people of the country directly or indirectly receive their income from the company. The president pointed out because of the late harvest and consequent delay in the movement of grain, the road carried to the ports of Lake Superior during the month of September only 1381 carloads as against 4898 carloads in September last year, but notwithstanding this large falling off in this particular kind of traffic the comparative week earnings have shown no diminution. He anticipated an extraordinary rush of grain to the head of Lake Superior before the close of navigation. The issue of four per cent. debentures were authorized for the following purposes: For acquisition of Bonds of Northern Colonization Railway, thirty-four miles, not exceeding twenty thousand dollars per mile. For additional use of Subsidy branch, not exceeding ten thousand dollars per mile for 226 miles. For two lake steamers, one hundred and eighty thousand pounds sterling, and one Pacific coast steamer, one hundred and twenty five thousand pounds sterling. For Regina-Saskatoon branch one hundred and sixty-five miles, and for the extension of the Moose Jaw branch, one hundred miles at four thousand pounds sterling per mile. The board was authorized for the construction or acquisition of two additional steamships for the Pacific trade, or to build two larger and faster boats for the Atlantic trade, transferring the Empress of Britain and the Empress of Ireland to the Pacific, and to incur the necessary capital expenditure therefor. At the C.P.R. meeting the directors met immediately after the meeting of the shareholders, at which meeting Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was elected president of the company, and David McNeoh, vice president, and the following were appointed the executive committee: Sir William Van Horne, chairman; Right Hon. Lord Strathcona, and Mount Royal, Richard B. Angus, Mr. E. B. Osler, M.P., Mr. Thomas G. Shaughnessy and Mr. David McNeoh. Western Offices: Winnipeg, Man. Regina, Sask.
