A DISQUISITION ON SNARING IN THE SNOW.

How to Hunt Birds and Rabbits the Winter Without Powder and Shot -Jay Birds in the Snow - Blinded

Crows-Snaring Br'er Rabbit. When I was a boy," remarked Uncle Jack, who found Peter sulking by the sitting room window because his father had forbidden him to borrow Micheal's, the stableman, gun, "I lived in the country too, and used to bag all the game I wanted in snares and traps of my own making."

Peter only grunted.

"Yes," continued his cheerful young uncle, "and I'd venture to say I could start out to-day, set a few good traps under the trees and along the edge of the woodlands and catch more rabbits and birds in twenty-four hours than Michael can shoot in a week with that

Now for the crow a simple sheet of white commercial note paper will do. Roll and paste this in the form of a cone with an opening at the top measuring at least three inches across. All along the inside edge of this opening smear a little bird lime, and this you can buy already prepared at any bird shop, or fill its place by boiling down some linseed oil until it is very thick and sticky. Press the paper cone up to its very edge in the snow and drop a few well cracked grains of corn into the bottom. When the crow thrusts his head in for one luseious mouthful his disgust and surprise are unbounded as he finds he cannot withdraw it, for the paste on the cone holds him as securely as the javbird's op knot, and only human hands can

Another favorite trick of mine was catching birds with an owl, an old stuffed fellow I possessed and would fasten on the limb of a tee, smearing the branches about him with home made bird lime. As perhaps you know, it is only during the day, when he is stupid with sleep and blinded by light, that the memaller birds have no fear of an owl. smaller birds have no fear of an owl, and if they find one recklessly wandered forth from his knot hole retreat, or distorth from his that had retreat, or as-cover his daylight hiding place, they will gather and punish him soundly for his midnight depredations. My dummy well never failed to attract a congrega-tion of birds and when once settled on the branches they stuck there until I came to pluck them off.

"However, I always preferred to catch birds in snares or coop traps that I made for myself. An ordinary coop trap set with the figure four triggers and a little meal answers for the small hedge birds and famished little fellows that hop about on the lawn. For quail wire snares are the luckiest and most quickly made. To set up the best of this kind drive the stout stakes, each about a foot and a half long, into the earth three or four feet apart. From top to top stretch taut a length of heavy twine. At spaces five inches along this twine fasten a series of slipping nooses made of any flexible wire with the opening of every noose as large as a tea cup saucer. Let them all hang at least a fourth of an inch above the ground and sprinkle about a handful of oats or whole wheat. Such a trap is best up at the edge of a woodland or where the long meadow grass is high above the snow. Here the quail run back and forth in search of for and sometimes a hurrying rabbit will come to grief in

"To snare rabbits though you cannot do better than take lessons of the English poachers who build the cleverest, simplest twitch up snares in the world.

A knife, a few thick shingles, some and wire are all the materials needed for building one. Select a spot which you suspect the light-footed, Molly cotton tail frequents and drive deeply into the ground a piece of shingle nearly a foot long, half an inch thick and two inches broad. Insert this about four neerly a root long, nair an inch take and two inches broad. Insert this about four feet distant from a tough little oak or hickory sapling that is not more than three feet high and from which you must lop all its branches. Now cut in the upright stick, just where the sketch I am making shows a square notch into which will fit the long pointed bait which will fit the long pointed bait stick, that has an angle notch at one end to correspond with an angle notch in the top of the upright stick. Putting the bait and upright stick together fit into their notches a third bit of stick called the catch piece and then, tying a bit of twine to the top of the sapling bendit over until it leans in the form of an arc and the other end of the twine can be fastened to the catch piece.

"From the same sort of wire as that used in the quall snare make a running "From the same sort of wire as that used in the quail snare make a running noose to hang over the bait end of the long stick and attach this to the twine that holds the sapling. Cut what remains of the shingles in strips and drive these into the ground around the trap, in the form of a pen, on three sticks, and so force master rabbit to take the first nip at the bait only by poking his head through that wire noose. He will be sure to venture and within an instant after his hungry tongue has touched the dainty morsel triggers and springing after his hungry tongue has touched the dainty morsel triggers and springing upright, will hang the poor beast as neatly as a regular gallows. But twine will snap out of place and the sapling, remember whatever else you do never set a snare for any of these animals with your bare hands, wear a pair of clean old gloves and prepare all your triggers, stakes and wires anywhere else but on the ground where you intend to lay your trap, for even a starvtend to lay your trap, for even a stary ing rabbit will think twice before ven-turing in where too ostensible prepara-tion has been made for his coming."
