Come seventees years ago a young man left Cape Breton to seek a living, leaving behind him e wife and titule daughter, since when no word was received of him by the natious ones at house. A couple by the natious ones at house. A couple of weeks ago the big chip County of Yarmouth was standard on Petrie's ledges and the crew discharged, among them and the long a broken down wreck of what had conce been a bold sailor man. It was discovered by readents of our own town that this was the long lost husband and father. He was induced to write to the locality is which he formerly lived, the answer to which was the promp: pypelarsuse of the long neglected but still fathiful wife, when a happy rounds took-place. The last seen of the now happy pair was weading their way down Archibald's whar towards the Peerless, the foad wife supporting the wrole of her former lover and long towards the Peerless, the foad wife supporting the wrole of her former lover and long towards the peerless, the foad wife supporting the word hashed as he limped feably stong. Such lasting devotion and fidelity is worthy of mote.
