Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

I've always sought the silver lining when'er a cloud appeared; no foolish tears of vain repining have trickled down my beard. When I encounter grief and sorrow, I say: "It cuts no grass, for things will come my way to-morrow—misfortunes always come to pass." At divers times when people saw me wear grins and sing a song, they stopped me to rebuke and fawn me, and said: "Your head's on wrong; to go around and sing and chortle when woes are thick as rats, chows that you're dippy, foolish, mortal! Your belly's full of bats!" And still, when I saw sorrows thicken, my hopeful song was sung, and now that I am sorely stricken in years I still am young. My heart does not with age grow colder—"was never stepped in tears; and I know men who seem much older, who've lived but half my years. Whenever I see a grinch I strike it, and knock its features in; the more I live a-shining, and when I come to die I still shall see the silver lining, and find it by and by.

A Big Snowfall.

In the storm of Tuesday a good deal of snow fell along the railway line, but at no place was the snow fall so heavy as at Brigus Junction. The train hands who were in that section say that the storm was as severe as some which they have experienced in mid-winter. On the western end of the line there was no snow, though for a while it was stormy, and yesterday the weather all along was very mild.

Fair Whaling Voyage.

The whaling voyage is now coming to an end, and this season will be a fair one, except for a few instances, where the steamers will hardly clear their expenses. These include the Hawk and Port Saunders, and possibly the Cachelot, which however has 5 sperms to her credit with 15 fins and humps. The Puma, Cabot and Lynx have very good voyages landed and are yet doing well.

Madeira Fish Has Advanced.

Yesterday afternoon the city fish buyers met and discussed the price of cod. Madeira was increased 20 cts. per qtl. in the local market but other kinds remain as they were. Madeira is now put down at $5.20 per qtl., just 30 cts. less than merchantable. Oil, salmon, hoiesters and herring remain as they were.

Bombardment of Tripoli.

ITALIAN FLEET REDUCED
FORTS TO RUINS.

Special to Evening Telegram:

LONDON, To-day.
The news despatches from Rome give account of the bombardment of Tripoli. At 3 o'clock on Tuesday, Vice-Admiral Taravelli signalled to the battleships, Giuseppe Garibaldi and Francesco Ferruccio, that the bombardment was about to begin. These vessels with the flagship steamed up to within two kilometres, i.e. about a mile and a third, of the town. The first shells were directed at the Governor's Palace and were well placed. Immediately the Palea and Amelia Sultana forts replied with a number of shots from 15 centimetre guns. The Turkish aim was bad. The Vavez and the Ferruccio directed their fire against the fortifications, at the lighthouse on the mole, which replied with smaller guns. Flares were kept flying over all the Consulates. The forts showed Turkish flags. After the bombardment had progressed for an hour, the shells from the Vavez destroyed the lighthouse, which collapsed in ruins. The Governor's Palace was riddled with shots and severely battered. The central forts ceased firing at 5 o'clock, but the outer forts Hamidieh and Sultanieh kept on the defence. Their shots were better directed. The quays were deserted. A number of fires broke out. During the night the sky glowed with the reflection of the fires in the town. The bombardment was resumed yesterday, and was heavier than the day before. The outer forts had been reduced to ruins and were unable to reply. The Turks removed the guns to the heights beyond the town and reopened fire from there. They were however, dispersed by shrapnel from the fleet and fled in all directions.

Avoided Useless Bloodshed

Special to Evening Telegram:

ROME, To-day.
Admiral Andrea, in command of the Italian fleet at Tripoli, reports that in bombarding the city, he spared the consulates, the hospitals, the churches, the monasteries, and all the convents. During the night the forts were able to approach the city closely and take accurate aim. The bombardment was protracted because of the extreme care taken to avoid useless bloodshed and to respect the homes of non-combatants and the Mosques. The fire from the Turks was absolutely harmless, none of their shots reaching the ships.

Harvest Thanksgiving.

The spacious lecture room of George Street Church was comfortably filled last night by members of the Epworth League and their friends, to join in thanksgiving for the bounties of the year. The platform and surroundings were filled with the products of the soil and sea, generously donated by well-wishers of the League and its missionary enterprises. Friends from as far west as Topsail and as far east as Quidi Vidi contributed, and some even from these extreme points, were present at the meeting. Dr. Duncan, an adept in the manipulation of the programme and expressions of delight were heard on every hand at the way he conducted the service right through.

Mr. Fred Moore, than whom no better could have been chosen, spoke to the topic of "Harvest of the Sea," and his practical knowledge of the art helped him largely in the success of his effort was declared to be. Though suffering from an inconvenient cold, Mr. Moore convinced those of his hearers who were not previously aware of the fact, that he was no novice on the platform and no mean speaker. He not only spoke of the fisheries themselves, but intelligently commented upon the present legislation bearing upon them, and pointed out many much needed improvements along this line. Mr. Andrew Gleneden, one of the most intelligent and up-to-date body of farmers, was the next speaker, and captivated his audience from the word "go."

Dealing as he had with historical and scientific data pertaining to agriculture, Mr. Gleneden imparted a great deal of knowledge to his hearers that was new to most of them; and this emphasizes the utility of free lectures to the public generally upon subjects affecting their different callings. The address was not only pleasing in a high degree but most entertaining and instructive.

The Rev. Dr. Rogers, pastor of Gower St. Church, was the next speaker, and was given as a text the "Harvest of Lives." Space will not permit us to give even a synopsis of the able manner in which the learned doctor traced his analogies between the operation of laws in the natural world and those which govern human lives in the making of the man and the stamping of character. It was one of those brilliant efforts for which the rev. gentleman is so famous, and deeply impressed his hearers with the feeling that earthly possession is not everything and that this life is not all.

Mrs. Cockburn, a recent acquisition from the Mother Country to our ranks of platform singers, delighted all present with her charming rendition of "Let me be unto the fields," from Gail's Cantata "Ruth." This lady possesses a very sweet soprano voice and should be heard frequently during the coming winter at our concert halls. Mr. H. T. Courtney, sang Toft's "Good-bye" in his own inimitable way, and had to respond to repeated applause by singing the last portion over again. Miss Tucker and

The Recital.

At Cochrane St. Church last evening there was a pleasing and agreeable rendition of sacred music. The choir of this church is noted for its good singing, while the organ is one of the best in the city. Despite the postponement from Tuesday night, and the many other attractions of the night, there was a good gathering who thoroughly enjoyed the one hour programme. Of the Organist it is needless to say anything, and his selections were very pleasing and brought out to the full the sweet and majestic tones of the instrument. Perhaps the most enjoyable number was the postlude "Alla Marcia" in E-flat, amongst the loud pieces, while Wagner's "Evening Star" and Gounod's "Ave Maria" were greatly appreciated. Amongst the selections that were softer in tone, the choir did splendidly. Miss Vincent taking the solo in the anthems, while Miss Clara Curtis gave a vocal solo by Duella Buck. She has a sympathetic voice, and last evening appeared to enter fully into the spirit of her piece, charming all by her varied expression and full tones. The recitals at this church are always enjoyable, and we hope that they will long continue.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, Oct. 5, 1911.
The Sanidont Tooth Brush, as it becomes better known, is gradually replacing to a great extent all other makes we have. The reasons are: First, its shape, which enables it to clean the teeth quickly and effectively in less time than an ordinary brush takes; secondly, its durability; for this brush does not shed its hair as ordinary brushes do, and being made of the best bristles, does not quickly become soft and so comparatively worthless. You should get one next time. Price, 35c. each. Half or medium.
