FURNISHING HOUSEHOLD OIL.

A friend of mine has four small children of whom the oldest is nine and the youngest two. With her lives a woman of about 80 and her husband's cousin. That totals a family of eight. means a pretty busy household. Now this woman's husband is willing she should have a servant in the house, but she prefers not so.

Why?
Not on account of expenses, for when she reckoned up what she was paying to have a woman come in and clean and to have the laundry put out, she found it totalled about $13.

Not on account of space, she has room enough for she lives in a big old fashioned house.

But just for this reason. She dreads the adding of one more personality to her household. An alien personality that will inevitably involve a certain amount of friction, of adjusting, of harmonizing.

She is the Adjustment Bureau.

"All that," she says, "will come on me, of course, and I do enough of it now. Everyone tries to help, but I have to be the Adjustment Bureau for all complaints and misunderstandings and collisions. I have to see that the children don't wake Cousin John too early in the morning; and that mother doesn't fall asleep in the living room and bother my husband by snoring when he is having his after dinner cigar; and that everybody gets their fair share of the bathroom, and all that sort of thing. If there was another person in the house to keep happy and satisfied and out of the other's way, I think I would go crazy. I'd rather do the extra work myself than furnish any more oil for the household machinery."

Do you wonder?

I don't think I do.

A Wearing Job.

Furnishing oil for the household machinery is one of the unpaid, unpraised, unrecognized jobs of the housemother that often has more share in making her worn out at the end of the day than all the hundred and one other things she has done.

No one has any conception of how much this sort of thing a woman does, because no man has the patience to do any of it himself.

If the fact were drawn to the average man's attention, that there is an inevitable drain of this sort upon the woman who is the focus of a large household he would probably say "Tommy Rot!" No need of it at all. Women exaggerate these things. If she wouldn't pay so much attention to these little things, now at the office I am ending with a glorified account of his superior skill in handling affairs.

He Sees the Difference.

But if his wife should take him at his word and not pay so much attention to these little things, he would feel the difference pretty quickly.

The only time a man like that realizes something of his wife's contribution to keeping things running smoothly is when she is sick or away.

I think every woman owes it to herself to go on a vacation once in a while, of if that is denied her to have a little sick spell. Don't you?

Magistrate Gives
of Own Medicine.

Alderman Edward Burke, of Pittston, Pa., showed that he was a two fisted dispenser of justice when he treated Anthony Azakas, charged with wife-beating, to a dose of his own medicine. Azakas had been brought before the Magistrate for blackening the eye of his wife. Mrs. Azakas had told only part of her story when Alderman Burke shouted: "Wait a minute, I'm getting tired of this. I'm going to see how he likes it." With these remarks the magistrate came over the top of his desk, ordered Azakas to stand up, and as he did so, rapped him a nasty one over the left eye. The defendant went down, and the Alderman ordered him to his feet again. Azakas came up meekly and penitent but a blow just above the other optic sent him to the floor again. Sobbingly and pleadingly Azakas begged for mercy. He came up slowly to his feet, when a couple of slaps to the right and left sides of his face gave him the desire to see how fast the Alderman could run. Azakas did not get very far, for Burke got him by the collar, and shook him up a bit and sat him down harder than he had ever been seated before. Up went his hands for mercy, and when he promised repeatedly that he would never raise a hand against his wife the Alderman decided to let her up on the rough stuff. Azakas thought it was all over, and was ready to take the arm of his wife and leave. "Just a second," said the Alderman. "There is a little matter here. It will require $10 to get your freedom." Azakas paid up and left with his wife.
