The Queen's Veil.

"A boat leaves at three today. You can be in readiness by that time, and I will have the coachman take you to the landing."

Without giving the girl time to make any reply, she turned abruptly from her, and was about to leave the room when she was arrested by her father.

"What is the meaning of this, Catherine?" he demanded, removing his spectacles, and regarding her with unfeigned astonishment.

"It means that I have dismissed Mademoiselle Florien," she answered, lightly.

"But why? What has the child done that she should be sent away in this summary manner?" he persisted, sharply.

"She has been guilty of a breach of decorum that I cannot overlook," my lady said, with slightly compressed lips. "Such as what?"

"The earl was determined that his favorite should have fair play; she allowed Lord Holborn, one day before we left London, to take her home from a shop to which I had sent her on some errand, it would have been much more to her credit had she taken a cab, instead of compelling a gentleman to walk that long distance with her. But doubtless she had her own reasons for so doing. I warned her of the impropriety of such a step for one in her position; but it appears that I might have spared my breath, for yesterday, just at dusk, she came walking up the avenue leading under her arm as confidently as if they were betrothed lovers. I thought I should sink to the ground with mortification, for his mother stood at the door and had the full benefit of the disgraceful scene."

"And had risen from her chair during this explanation, which so foolishly misrepresented her. Her cheeks had grown crimson, and her eyes very bright, while there was a quiet dignity about her that surprised both her companions."

"Your ladyship is misrepresenting me," she said, as Lady Arlesbury paused. "You doubtless have not forgotten how it happened. Lord Holborn accompanied me home that day in London, but in justice to myself I must explain to the earl that it was by accident that I met him, and his lordship claimed the privilege of attending me back to the house."

"By appointment, I suppose—I should expect nothing better from you," interrupted Lady Arlesbury, acrimoniously. "Madam, you only do me great injustice, but you also wrong your guest by such a charge." Tina returned, proudly.

"Lady Arlesbury colored; she saw that she was attributing more to Lord Holborn than she cared to do by such a statement, but to be told of it by one whom she considered her inferior made her furious."

"Do you mean to tell me that you did not know that Lord Holborn was in the grounds?" she demanded, sharply.

"I knew that he was calling here, but I had no thought of expecting to see him. It was purely by accident that I met him, and his lordship claimed the privilege of attending me back to the house."

"Privilege?" sneered her ladyship. "Had you no sense of propriety to teach you that you should not take his arm, or to allow Lady Holborn and Gertrude, to whom his lordship is particularly attentive, to see you upon such apparent terms of intimacy with him?" and to come in at the front entrance, where I was taking leave of my guests? I blush for shame when I think of it."

The color in Lady Arlesbury's face did not belie her words, although the fierce light in her eyes suggested that it might possibly arise from some other cause.

There was the least twinkle in Tina's brown eyes, and a suspicious twitching about her pretty lips, at her ladyship's assertion regarding Lord Holborn's attentions to the fair Gertrude, but she answered, quietly:

"Madam, I do not think I have done anything for which I need to feel ashamed."

Lady Arlesbury turned upon her almost fiercely, but before she could give utterance to the wrathful words upon her tongue, the door opened again, and a servant announced:

"Lord Holborn is below, my lady, and desires to see the earl and yourself; also, Mademoiselle Florien."

The emphasis upon the last two words plainly indicated that the man realized the strangeness of the situation as well as two, at least, of his astonished listeners.

"What?" demanded Lady Arlesbury, wheeling angrily round upon him.

"My lord requests the pleasure of mademoiselle's presence also," the man replied and then bowed himself out, with a grin.

The earl began to be a trifle perplexed over the appearance of affairs, while Lady Arlesbury looked the disgust that she felt.

She had settled in her own mind that Gertrude should marry Lord Holborn, and Lady Holborn herself had gently hinted that such a union would not be at all displeasing to her.

It would be such a "nice arrangement" all around, for their estates joined, and she could always have her daughter near her when they came to the sea shore, while their town houses were not so very far apart.

When his lordship had told her the previous evening that he should do himself the honor of calling upon her that morning, she had fondly hoped that his object might be to propose formally for the hand of her daughter, but to have him solicit the pleasure of the society of one of her sewing girls, while her own daughter was entirely ignored, was more than her haughty spirit could brook.

Bestowing a malignant look upon Tina, she said:

"If Lord Holborn imagines that he can make social calls upon my seamstress, in my house, he will find himself greatly mistaken. Come, my lord, you and I will go below and ascertain what this very singular request may mean. You miss, can remain where you are."

Tina, as serene, outwardly, as a fair morning in June, sat down in her chair to await the course of events, but her pulses were beating time to the rapid music of her heart, caused by the coming of her lover, and the expectation of what was to follow.

"Catherine, I'm afraid you are too hard upon the child," the earl said, as he arose to accompany his daughter, that bending at the same time, a regretful look upon his little companion, who every day was winning herself more closely about his heart.

"I believe the girl has some peculiar charm by which she bewitches all the men," muttered Lady Arlesbury, fully, as she took her father's arm and swept from the room.

And she was right about the fair maid, whom she had left behind.

There was a peculiar charm about her—the charm of a pure, unadorned heart, of true courtesy and of heart.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Local Tockey Team Plays Tie Game at Watford.

Watford, Ont., Jan. 14.—The hockey season opened here tonight with the Victorias of London. Owing to the condition of the ice the game was somewhat slow at times. At half-time the game stood 3 to 2 in favor of Watford.

At the end of the last half the score was 4 to 4. It was then decided to play five minutes each way, in which time neither scored, leaving the game a tie.

VICTORIAS VS. ABERDEENS.

A game of hockey was played at the Westminster rink on Saturday evening between the South London Victorias and the Aberdeens of West London. It was very exciting throughout the entire game, and at the close the score stood 2 to 2.

MIDLAND WITHDRAWS.

Midland, Ont., Jan. 14.—At a meeting of the managers of the Midland hockey league here tonight it was decided to withdraw both junior and intermediate teams from the O. H. A.

PARIS WON FROM BRANTFORD.

Paris, Ont., Jan. 14.—Nine to five in favor of the home team was the referee's report tonight at the close of one of the most keenly contested hockey matches played here for some time.

The Brantford club was the opposing factor, which, after meeting defeat on their own ice at the hands of Paris a week ago, had strengthened itself specially for tonight's game. Although the ice was sloppy, the play was very fast from start to finish, and although Paris had the best of it, they had to work hard for their victory. The game was at the intermediate O. H. A. series, and Paris has now two games to their credit, with none lost; Brantford, vice versa.

A TIE GAME.

Orillia, Ont., Jan. 14.—Before a large crowd, Barrie and Orillia played a tie game of hockey here tonight, the score being 5 to 5.

STRATFORD BEATS WOODSTOCK.

Stratford, Ont., Jan. 14.—Woodstock and Stratford juniors played a match in the O. H. A. series here tonight, the home team winning by a score of 3 to 2.

In the first half only one goal was scored and that by Woodstock. In the second half Stratford scored three in quick succession and Woodstock the last one.

THE JUNIORS.

Midland, Ont., Jan. 14.—The first hockey match in the junior series on Midland ice was played here tonight between Waubesa and Midland, resulting in a victory for the home team by a score of 7 to 4. The play was fast from start to finish and of glit-edge color.

ST. GEORGE'S DEFEATED.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—On ice that was almost slush, and while it was raining outside, South Parkdale tonight beat St. George's by 6 to 3 at the Caledonian rink in the intermediate series of the O. H. A. The victory of South Parkdale was a distinct surprise.

STRATFORD HERE TOMORROW.

Tomorrow (Wednesday) night London will meet Stratford in the return game for the championship of group 8. This game will virtually decide the championship of the district, and will be one of the hardest fought matches ever seen on London ice. The locals intend to try and wipe out their defeat in Stratford, and are confident of victory. Their opponents are strong, and will make a brilliant battle, in order to accommodate the crowd and to prevent the rush at the door, tickets will be sold down town. Hugh Jack, of Toronto, who acted as referee in the match at Stratford, has been agreed to by both clubs, and will be the official arbiter on Wednesday night. Stratford will run a special train, which is due at 7:30, and will bring over a big crowd of rooters.

JUNIORS PLAY GUELPH TONIGHT.

London's junior team plays a championship match in Guelph tonight, and the youngsters should succeed in landing a victory. The team will be composed of: Goal, A. Gibbons; point, G. Gibbons; cover, McGuffin; forwards, Labatt, Woolley, McMahon, Dowell and Coughlin. Gordon Crawford, of Toronto, will referee. The return match will be played in London early next week, and will be the first time London has met a Guelph team since the sad fate which befell the late lamented "famous Nationals" a couple of years ago.

It looks as if Paris would give Woodstock a merry race for the championship of the central division. The Parisians have twice defeated the strong Brantford aggregation and seem to be fully as good as they ever were. It looks as if Paris had at least an even money show for the Fawkes trophy.

BASEBALL.

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 14.—The lovers of baseball in Baltimore were given interested in the statement given out in New York last night by Frank De Haas, manager of the St. Louis club, in which he accused McGraw and Robinson, the famous players, of playing a double game with the National League and with having betrayed their business associates in the National Baseball Association, which it had been attempted to organize last year. Both players indignantly deny the charges of bad faith.

FISTIC A DRAW.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 14.—The Kid Road-Dave Sullivan fight at the Auditorium tonight was declared a draw at the end of the 25th round.

KNOCKED OUT.

Youngstown, Ohio, Jan. 14.—Young Gibbs, of Cincinnati, knocked out Young, of Buffalo, in the 20th round before the Mahoning A. C. tonight.

Dr. Chase Makes Friends Of Hosts of Women

By Curing Their Peculiar Ills—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a Surprising Restorative for Pale, Weak, Nervous Women.

As a result of much confinement within doors, and the subsequent lack of fresh air and healthful exercise, most women not only lose much in figure and complexion, but also suffer more or less from serious bodily derangements as the result of thin, watery blood and exhausted nervous system.

More than nine-tenths of the cases of diseases peculiar to women are directly due to a weakened condition of the nerves and can be cured thoroughly and permanently by taking mild outdoor exercise, breathing plenty of pure, fresh air, and using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to form new blood and to vitalize the depleted nervous system.

It takes time to build up the system anew, to fill the shriveled arteries with new rich blood, restore the wasted nerve cells, and renew the activity of the bodily organs, but the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will accomplish these results and bring health and happiness to weak, nervous and suffering women.
