CHAPTER XXXV.

Kenneth was on his way, one evening, from his office to his boarding place, when he became conscious of some con-fusion behind him. Then he heard the sound of a fire-gong, and looking back saw a hose-wagon coming rapidly down the stret, and preceding an engine. It was almost upon him as he turned, and at that instant a shrill scream rent air, and he saw a woman thrown to the ground. She had been in the act of crossing the street, and, not being quite quick she had been knocked down by ne of the horses. Kenneth, ever on the alert to help anyone in trouble, sprang forward with the ficetness of a deer, grasped the unfor-tunate woman by her clothing, and drag-ged her out of the way of the rapidly advancing fire-engine, which would have crushed her instantly to death beneath its penderous wheels. The woman was a erson belonging to the poorer class, and sixty years of age. eth was convinced that she was badly ijured, in spite of his timely help, for he could not support herself, and moan-ed constantly, as if in great pain. He questioned the suffering woman, who nanaged to gasp out her address. Quick-ly summoning a hack, he gently placed her inside and took a seat beside her. In the course of twenty minutes the vehicle arrived at the designated house, an hum-ble tenement in the middle of a block. A woman of about forty answered the ring

"Mother! mother!" she gasped, with white lips, as she caught sight of the ctill figure in he carriage. "What his happened to her?" Kenneth gave a brief account of the sceldent, and hen he and the hackman

An hour later Dr. Wentworth arrived, his name having been suggested by the daughter, who knew him to be a skillful physician, and he had responded as soon as possible to the call.

After a careful examination the doctor announced his verdict: "Her back is broken, and I can do noth-"Her back is broken, and I can do nothing for her, except, perhaps to mitigate her pain. She may live two weeks, and yet she is liable to die at any moment." The unfortunate woman insisted upon having the doctor's opinion, and when it was repeated to her, although she was very calm, a look of terror leaped into her eyes, piainly betraying that death was full of terrors for her.

The look in the woman's eyes, when

The look in the woman's eyes, when apprised of her doom, haunted Kenneth continually, for it told him that she was not prepared for the solemn change awaitnot prepared for the solemn change awaring her, and he felt a strange yearning to direct her mind into a more peaceful channel. He learned that her name was Morris. She was a widow, and lived with her maiden daughter, whom she called "Marthy," while they supported themselves by doing fine washing and ironof course she does; one could see that ing, though it was whispered among those who knew them best that the elder woman had a comfortable income from the money which she had saved during her prosperous days, when she had acted as a profesional nurse, and which had been very wisely invested. Kenneth was deeply interested in the poor creature whom he had saved from instant death only to die lingeringly, and he went every day to the humble home of the unfortunate woman, to inquire if he could be of service in any way, and to leave some little luxury for the invalid. Thus Martha Morris came to look for him with eager interest, and to depend upon his words of comfort and cheer in her great comfort and cheer in her great

"Oh, no," Kenneth answered, cheerfully; "I will gladly go in if she wishes it," and following the spinster, he soon found himself beside the spotless bed upon which lay the dying woman. upon which lay the dying woman.
"Mother, here's the young gentleman,
Mr. Keith, come to see you," Miss Martha said, bending over the drowsing in-

The woman opened her eyes and looked at Kenneth for a moment, then feebly put out her hand toward him. Kenneth took it respectfully, and sat down in the chair which her despetter placed for him. chair which her daughter placed for him. Kenneth pressed the hand which clung to him, and made some kind and sympa-thizing remark, which quieted her for the time. Just as he arose to go she burst forth plaintively:

"Mr. Keith, do you believe there is a hereafter? Is there really a God, and a -judgment, as some people say, or do we just die, and is that the end of us?"

Poor Kenneth! He had never sat by the bedside of the dying before, and these seemed very hard questions to him.

"Yes, Mrs. Morris," he said, in kindly tones. "I do believe in a hereafter, in a 'Golden City' with 'walls of jasper and gates of pearl, where there will be no more pain or sorrow and where the more pain or sorrow, and where 'the weary will be at rest.' I believe in God as the great Father, who loves the chilas the great Father, who loves the children whom he has created, who would not see one of them perish, and who invites all to come to him through his on."

"But the judgment! the judgment!" she cried, with a shiver. "Oh, Mr. Keith! that is what I am arraid of in the hereafter, if there is one. "We are judged already," Kenneth replied, with sweet solemnity. "Whoever ceives the gift of eternal life through Christ is saved; whoever rejects it is condemned already, even while he lives." "Suppose," she said, "a person had wronged others years and years ago-so long ago that it had grown to seem more like a dream than a reality—would that wrong have to be set right before the gift you speak of could be received and the terror of death pass away?" "Certainly, dear Mrs. Morris; does not felt that I was as good as the majority of people. I know that I am kind-heart-ed. I have often sacrificed my own comfort to do others a kindness; I have been good to the poor, and nessed the sick with all the faithfulness of which I was capable. But once I did a great wrong, though I was tempted to it by another. It has been heavy on my conscience for many years, and now that I know that I am going to die, it is always in my mind; sleeping or waking, it is ever present with me. Must I confess it Mr. Keith, even though I know that I can never repair the wrong?"

Jim Corbett admits that an "unknown" came near putting it all over im not many years ago, Tom Sharkey being the "unknown," writes H. P. Edwards, of Cleveland.

"I was touring the country," said Corbett to a group of friends at the Colonial, Sunday evening, "and was matched to meet a sailor by the name of Sharkey at 'Frisco, in a four-round go. I had never heard of the man, and thinking I had a cinch, never trained a minute. Well, for two rounds I simply pounded him all over the ring, but when the third round began I was so tired I could scarcely lift my hands. and I want to tell you, had that fight been for five or six rounds I would have been knocked out. As it was, he put it all over me in the last three And just remember that Sharkey was practically a novice in those days.'

Interest in horse dentistry is awakened through the placing of Moth Miler, a former speedway champion, in museum in Boston. Moth Miller's claim to museum distinction is the possession of a number of gold teeth, which are exhibited to the curiosity seekers.

It is said that a horse in the stable of W. C. Whitney was the first in the world to have a tooth filled. That was years ago, writes a New York critic

Yet dentistry was not generally applied to horses until two years ago. Then a Philadelphia man took it up and his success soon demonstrated to veterinary surgeons of the country that something new nad been added to their profession. Last month a bay trotting mare worth $3,000 was sent from New York to Philadelphia to have a front tooth filled. She had broken the tooth off against her manger. The jagged edge cut her mouth and she could not eat because of pain. The filling, without any suffering on her part, was acomplished in less than an hour, and in the afternoon the little mare, with the tooth restored, boarded her private box car for home. This filling and crowning of the teeth of horses is done with aluminum and amalgam, as well as with gold. The operation varies in cost from $5 up to hundreds. The back molars require much gold, being an inch broad and three inches long.

It is reported that Dan Patch, 1:5914. the $60.000 pacer, will not be shipped from Kansas City this winter to the , ate with his ability. International Stock Farm, Minneapolis, but remain at the Christie stable and be given light work over the Brush Creek track to keep him in condition. When the sale of the premier sidewheeler was announced it was said that Mr. Savage would take the son of Joe Patchen to his new home, but Driver McHenry states otherwise. With Patch are the horses of the Sturgis string, which were shipped with him from Memphis for a rest after the close of a hard campaign, Prince Direct, Baron De Shay and Darwin, The horses are under the care of Dick Benson, who had C. Kansas City, while having some very cold weather, is, on the whole, a desirable place for winter training of horses, as there are comparatively few days throughout the bleaker months when a jog on the track is out of the question. Dan Patch, with the other horses, has been given work almost constantly since his effort to lower the world's record for a half mile at Kansas City.

The work consists entirely of jogging but it serves the purpose of keeping him in condition. The work and diet have evidently agreed with the cyclone pacer, for it is said he has g.own much heavier and his coat shows the best of attention and condition.

Mr. John Cox, of Windsor, N. S., has lost by death his good horse Special Blend 27675, record 2:081/4. only purchased him last September from E. Le Roy Willis, of Sydney. A feature of every football game that does not appear on the field or score boards is the pools that are decided by every big game played. The popular pool is a 50-cent proposition, and in every large office an enthusiast may be found who always organizes a pool. A paper box with the lid pasted to the body, and a slit cut in the top, is all the machinery needed for the game. Each victim of the pool habit writes his estimate of the score, say "22-8 on the Army," and signs his name to the slip, which he de-posits in the sealed box. Thus each With each guess is held a secret. guess comes a payment of 50 cents. and as may be imagined, a pool of $20 or so is soon collected. When the FOOTBALL.

CANADIANS IN ENGLAND. London, Dec. 31. - The visit of the Canadian football team is creating no stir whatever in football circles here, and the criticisms of the London newspapers are mainly from reports of journals, published at places where games have been played. The Canadians have yet to meet the most formidable teams of England and Wales | July 18. and are unlikely to prove superior to

The Daily Mail says: "There is a chance that the team will have an op portunity of displaying their skill in another kind of sport. It has been proposed that they give an exhibition of Canadian hockey on one of the rinks of London. If the proposal can be carried out the Canadians themselves will be quite ready."

THE RING.

TO BE FOUGHT IN WINDSOR? With the Governor of Michigan arrayed against him and the sheriff of the in which Detroit is situated, ready to arrest all hands, Manager Considine's whole idea now is to hold the Young Corbett-McGovern battle in Windsor, Ont., just across the river from Detroit. When this chance has been eliminated the only thing for the management of the Metropolitan A. C. to do is to call the affair off. And this Manager Considine says will be done. Windsor presents many advantages for an affair of this kind, and heretofore boxing contests have not been disturbed. But the prominence of the principals in the long-deferred featherweight battle may be objectionable to the Canadian authorities, although fighting is tolerated at Fort Erie, Manager Considine at present banking a great deal on the Windsor project, and he believes that assurances will be received in a short time that will warrant him in announcing the transfer of the match to Canadian soil. So far as Louisville is concerned, the Southern A. C. of that city cannot handle the bout if it gets it, for some time. The legal proceedings in Kentucky are not yet concluded, and will not be for several weeks. This gives the Detroit club an advantage on time, and it believes that the boxers will consent to meet under its management if the Windsor project can be made to look good inside of a few days.

BRITT PREFERS TO FIGHT. Jimmy Britt is tired of the stage. He is anxious to get into the ring again. but has received no offers commensur-

"There are two fights I would like to arrange," he says. "One is with Young Corbett and the other is with McGovern. Corbett, I know, is a hard proposition, but if he should meet me San Francisco, at 130 pounds, weigh in at 3 o'clock, I would break my stage engagements to give him a 'go." 'As to McGovern, I can beat him to a certainty. I boxed with him once as an amateur and bested him. Since then I have greatly improved and he has declined.

STOPPED IN CHICAGO. Chicago, Dec. 31.7 Promoters of the boxing game greatly fear that the sport may be stopped altogether in this city. The first bomb has been thrown by Acting Governor Northcott, who has notified the sheriff of Cook County that the six-round bout tween Kid Carter and George Gardner scheduled for the Lyceum Club Monday night must be stopped.

The first sign of trouble came when sheriff received a letter from Springfield warning him that he must not permit violations of the law. Sheriff Barrett immediately wired the acting governor that he would see that the law would not be violated. He a'so told the governor that the Lyceum Club was a chartered organization, and had a permit to hold boxing contests. 'I shall be at the ringside Monday night," said the sheriff, "but I will not stop the contest unless it becomes bru-The men who are billed to take part in the bouts are. Mr. McCullough, secretary of the Ottawa Ice Racing Association, states that all their classes have filled so well that it will be necessary in some cases to divide the races. He states that the Canadian entries include horses from Nova Scotia to the Northwest Territories, and United States entries from Maine to Ohio. He reports that Barney Demarest, of New York City, has already arrived with seven horses and that three more of his string will be there in a few days. He expresses himself as more than satisfied with the generous response he has received from horse owners.

BASEBALL.

A NEW SCHEME.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 30. - From a reliable source it was learned today that the American League at last week's meeting in Chicago decided definitely upon a line of action for next season, regardless of what the result may be of the meeting of the peace commissioners representing the major organizations at Cincinnati Jan. 5. The plan as outlined is to invade New York and Pittsburg and drop Baltimore and Washington from the American circuit. The junior organization will thus parallel the National League inside of the latter's eight cities. order to give the plan agreed upon at Chicago an opportunity to work itself out, it was decided to call a "special' meeting," thus deferring the "regular" or annual meeting until the next gathering of the Johnsonites.

The Baltimore franchise will go to New York and Washington will be transferred to Pittsburg. Mr. Postal, it is claimed, having agreed to the proposition after hearing that President Johnson had definitely slated Tom Loftus for the presidency of the New York club. Mr. Pedder and his Pittsburg colleagues, being unable to secure the Detroit club at a fair figure, had almost abandoned all hope of securing American League franchise, when it is declared Mr. Postal came to their rescue by announcing that if Manager Logius did not remain with him, he would sell his Washington club and quit baseball.

This announcement gave Messrs. Pedder, Kerr & Co. the cue, and they at once opened negotiations with Mr. Postal for the Washington franchise, representing it to the latter that Man-York. Mr. Postal lost no time in making a demand on President Johnson to know positively whether Manager been selected to head the New York club, to which he received a reply that the owners of the New York franchise would like to have Mr. Loftus and it was for the latter to decide whether or not he would remain in Washington. This reply was not satisfactory to Mr. Postal, but practically nvinced him that it meant negotiations were on between Messrs, fowle and Somers with Mr. Loftus, which would ultimately result in the latter going to New York, and he is reported to have determined to carry out his threat, and forthwith offered to sell his Washington franchise to the Pittsburgers.

It is understood that the conditions imposed by Mr. Postal were that, if Messrs. Pedder, Kerr & Co. reimbursed him for his financial outlay in Washington, they could have the franchise Postal rather surprised the Pittsburgers by acknowledging that the Wash ington club had lost money the past two seasons. The Pittsburgers agreed to the terms. In order to make a win-ning fight against the National League for the baseball prestige in Pittsburg, Messrs. Pedder, Kerr & Co. are said to have promised a first-class team, with as many Pittsburg favorites on it as possible.

ATHLETICS.

THE GYMNASIUM TEAM LAST NIGHT.

The University of Toronto gymnasium team, who are on their western tour, presented an assault-at-arms and gymnastic exhibition at the Auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Seventh Regiment Fusiliers Athletic Association. It is a pity that the audience was so slight, for, in its way, the team is as good, or perhaps even better, than any that has ever visited London. Taken all in all, the team put up an excellent exhibition, and in all their work, on the vaultinghorse, on the mat, on the parallel bars or on the horizontal bars, it would have been difficult to excel them. It was not a case, either, of some being proficient were good in everything, and the excellence of their work, merely shows what may be accomplished by continued systematic training. Perhaps the feature of their work which deserves the highest praise was their vaulting-horse exercise. The skill they displayed and the number of different movements they showed proficiency in was little short of a velation to the uninitiated. Another feature of the programme which caught the house was the sword and bayonet exercise. Both Wood and Baldwin put up a good stiff tussle for the mast and at moments it almost looked as though the fight were in earnest.

During the course of the evening selections were very acceptably rendered by the Kenwick Male Quarter, under Mr. W. S. Spence, and the Sev-Regiment Band, under Bandmaster Hiscott

The programme was as follows: Vaulting-horse, gymnasium class; sword vs. bayonet, Wood and Baldwin sparring, light-weight, Loudon and Reed; mat work, gymnasium class; fencing, Greig and Forbes; parallel bar, gymnasium class; saber vs. saber, Baldwin and Forbes; bayonet vs. bayonet, Biggs and Greig; horizontal har, gymnasium class; quarter-staff, Biggs and Baldwin; sparring, heavy-weight Scholes and Baldwin.

THEY MADE MONEY. Chicago, Dec. 31. — For the first time in the history of the University of Chicago, the athletic finances of that institution are on a firm foundation. Manager Butterworth's yearly state-ment, just issued, shows that $48,000 has been realized from football games alone. Baseball and track athletics swell the amount by some few thousands more. The nearest the university ever came to this figure was in when $42,000 was the total receipts for the year of athletics.

HOCKEY. THE GAME TONIGHT.

The hockey game tonight be-ween the Seventh Regiment and tween Stratford O. H. A. teams will be the opening game, and promises to be a good one and show the full playing strength of the London team. Gauthier will be at cover-point and he is an acknowledged leader in this position among the best cover points in Canada. It was his (Gauthier's) magnificent playing last season that kept the Waterloo team from scoring a single goal in the last game, and Bert Glover will certainly play goal, so that with Leddy at point, the Seventh will have as strong a defense as ever went on the ice to represent the city; and then the forwards have had several good workouts since their defeat at Stratford on Monday night last. The team will make a determined effort to win their first game at home. The game will certainly be fast and very interesting to all who enjoy the excitement of hoc-

BELLEVILLE TOO GOOD FOR QUEEN'S.

Belleville, Dec. 31.-Belleville's intermediate hockey team played their first match of the season tonight, when they met the intercollege champions of last season, Queen's University seniors, in an exhibition game. The Belleville men proved all that was expected of them, winning a very fast game by goals to 4. In the first half Belleville scored after a minute's play, and tallied three more before time called. The visitors, although playing strongly, were unable to get the puck into Belleville's net. It was do or die with Queen's in the second half, and they worked desperately and succeeded in scoring four goals to Belleville's three. There was a large audience, and the decisions of the referee. although questioned in the first half by the Queen's team, gave general satisfaction. The teams were:
