Remarkable Vitality Shown by a Victim of the Darlington Disaster.

New York, March 4. - After living more than 30 hours under the mass Q of steel beams, and other debris of the collapsed Hotel Darlington West Forty-sixth street, Charles Lasek, cement worker, died early today while being carried to Flower Hospita in an ambulance. This increases the known dead to fifteen. The finding of a live human being amongst the mass of iron work, brick and mortar shortly after 2 o'clock this morning was perhaps the most sensational thing of the kind in the history of similar disasters in this city. From the hour of the collapse hundreds of men have struggled amid the wreckage, with derricks, to get to the bottom the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of London intends to undertake the following works or improvements, and to assess and levy the cost thereof by means of a special rate, to be the second of the pile, where inore than half a dozen dead fellow-workmen were known to lie. Suddenly, when a heavy beam has been hoisted a man half-pinioned below, was seen to move known to lie. Suddenly, when a heavy

Meanwhile, the surgeons had crawled not make good with the people into the pile and reached his side. He was given stimulants internally and injections of whisky with cocaine, and hopes were strong of saving the man who had escaped death in the crash and then fought off suffocation and starvation so long. He was carefully lifted into an ambulance but died before the hospital was reached. One arm had been broken and there was a great hole in the man's head. His vitality must have been tremendous to survive so long with these injuries,

The J. B. Wills Comedy Company, very cheap show at a moderately cheap great care had to be taken in freeing price, concluded a two nights' engagement at the Grand Opera House last night. Evidently, the company did first night, for last night there was but a small audience, and of these only the merest sprinkling were in the pit. Of the two performances put on by the Wills, last night's was decidedly weakest. It is known as "Two Old Cronies," but it could be as easily designated any other name. The alleged comedy of the piece is the rankest drivel, accumulated, undoubtedly, by the men who purvey it, while in barn storming expeditions. For some reason the Wills company pads out the east, and last night and Wednesday night there were from twelve to fourteen names on the pro-4 feet 6 inches.

At the hospital, Lasek's identity was gramme, followed by the words, "chorus quickly established by means of a union girls," etc. As a matter of fact, but ten eleven appeared on the boards of the Grand, and the chorus girls, etc. were composed of four girls and the female impersonator, who are the only women in the cast, and besides forming the chorus, are everything else in the company.
