THE WOMAN'S CORNER

FAMOUS WOMAN PIANIST SAYS ALL CHILDREN SHOULD BE TAUGHT MUSIC

By Dorothy Dale. Chicago, May 24.-All children should be taught music. This is the belief of Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, one of the greatest women pianists the world-many cities her the greatest. Mme. speaks not only from the stand-point of a musician, but also as a mother. To illustrate her point she cited the following: "Some boys are tying a can to a poor dog's tail. The little girls farther up the block are quarrelling over who had the most turns at skipping the rope. Then along comes a band.

"You know what happens. The boys chuck the can and hurrah. The little girls drop the rope and slip away, eyes and feet are dancing. They follow the band as far as they dare.

"And how do they come back? Everybody knows that, too. Their faces are bright; the bad temper is gone and they go to playing, a different set of girls and boys.
"And yet people don't think it's necessary to teach the children

"Reading is splendid, of course it is," she went on. "So is seeing. The beauty of the world about us and as see it through a master's eyes on his canvas-all that has a wonderful effect on us. But harmony music-why, the tots begin to hum before they want to read. It's the only thing that takes us up out of ourselves. The effect of the band on the children shows how inborn magic of it is. And a band-well, the better the music, the better the ef-

Oddly enough, the bent plates of the dynamite laden Sylph suggested a strange connection between the carved gourd and the strained position of affairs in the Cameroons. He had no manner of doubt that when the royal yacht crashed into a sunken wreck the pre vious day it liberated the calabash, which forthwith drifted into the Solent, and escaped notice until dscovered by Evelyn Dane. The violet-tinted gloom that marks the close of a fine summer's day in London was filling the room with its shadows, when Warden had written the last words of a fair copy. He li a cigar, placed an easy chair so that Warden laughed, stuffed the gourd he might sit with his back to the winqueer document which had fallen into his hands in such an extraordinary manner, when he noticed that the face on the gourd, though tilted on the table exactly in the same fashion as on the counter of the luggage-room at Waterloo, appeared to be watching him. Now, no man of strong nervous power likes to feel startled, and that the stealthy menace in those evil eyes was startling he did not attempt to deny. He had not noticed previously that-no matter what the angle-so long as the eyes were visible they seemed to look fixedly at the beholder. Thinking that the waning light was deceptive, he sprang up and built some books into a V-shaped support, that enabled him to set the scowling face in many positions. The varying tests all had the same result. The snakelike glance followed him everywhere. The very orbs appeared to turn in the head. In the depening twilight they seemed to gleam with a dull fire, and Warden was absolutely forced to reason himself out of the expectation that soon those brutal lips would open and overwhelm him To Be Continued.
