TUDGE CAMERON'S REASONS FOR NOT SITTING IN THE HIGH COURT.

le Contends That He Has All His Old Powers But Not Any New Ones—The Other Side of the Case—The Non Action of the Minister of

On Tuesday it was reported that Mr. Justice Cameron had refused to sit as a judge under the new judicature act. The reports varied both as to the extent of Mr. Cameron's refusal and the reasons assigned for it, and in ord—to get at the exact state of the case The orld last night

Have you heard anything about the stand the other judges are taking?
"I think there is very considerable doubt in the other judges' minds; but none of them is disposed to raise any obstacle that can possibly be avoided.

NO SERIOUS OBSTRUCTION. In reply to the question whether the difficulty would cause any serious obstruction in the business of the courts, Mr. Cameron in the business of the courts, Mr. Cameron said he did not think it would, for the reason that the judges still retained their power to sit as single judges. In fact, the whole difficulty, as Mr. Cameron said, was one rather of form than substance—the judges retained their old powers, but they were not judges of the high court of justice, and would not be until they were appointed.

ARE THE OLD COURTS ABOLISHED? even if they were abolished as courts—their powers being vested in the high court of justice—the powers of the judges remained intact. "To create us judges of the high court of justice," said Mr. Cameron, "would of course be an act of the Dominion parlia-

A leading member of the bar, who is also a member of the Ontario legislature, said in an interview yesterday that he wanot acquainted with the exact nature of Mr

NO COURT HAS BEEN ABOLISHED; there has only been a change of name. The high court is declared to be "a continuaetc. tion" of the three courts which compose it, and possessed of the same jurisdiction. Furthermore, every existing judge is decapable and liable to perform all duties which he would have been capable or liable to perform, as if the new act had not passed.

Why, then, should it be considered that the commissions of the judges had expired? There has been a fusion of the courts, but none of them have been abolished. The old distinctions have been abolished, and the old powers of the judges. preserved, and the old powers of the judges preserved, and the old powers of the judges are unaltered. The names of the courts and the titles of the judges have been changed, and that is about the extent of the matter, so far as concerns the relation of the judges to the courts. If parliament changes a man's name he does not thereby forfeit the right to his property. Why should a change in the name of a court, or in the title of any officer of a court, be held as forfeiting any office in it?

MR. CAMERON DESERVES CREDIT

MR. CAMERON DESERVES CREDIT MR. CAMERON DESERVES CREDIT
Mr. Cameron's objection must be regarded as very ingenious, but if well founded he deserves credit for taking it at the outset.
It is strange, however, that he did not feel it his duty to communicate with the attorney-general on the subject, so that any necessary steps might have been taken before the act came into force and the business of the courts resumed after the long ness of the courts resumed after the long

THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE.

To approvide against such a contingency, the department of justice at Ottawa was communicated with several weeks ago, but the minister does not appear to have thought that the issue of a new commission to the judges was called for.

Mr. Cameron's refusal to take his seat will doubtless lead the minister of justice to act promptly, so that the business of the courts may suffer no check. And should it he decided to issue a new commission to be decided to issue a new commission to the courts? AN EXPLANATION. AN EXPLANATION.

It will be seen in this interview that the main argument deals with the question of the abolition of the old courts; Mr. Justice Cameron's contention is in regard to cases, and the chancery court to deal with common law cases. The Judicature act, he said, was only an amplification of the Law Reform act, yet when the latter was passed no one raised the question that it was necessary to issue a new commission to the judges.

THE GERMAN JEWS.

THE PRESIDENT.

Very Little change in His Condition—A Fair Appetite—Opening of the Parotid Giand.

The wounded president had yesterday another day of little change. His appetite has improved and the condition of his stomach is more favorable. In the afternoon the swollen gland was opened and a small quantity of pus escaped. This was immediately followed by an increase of pulse, which continued until late in the evening. There is further talk about the removal of the patient from the white house, and Dr. Bliss telegraphed Dr. Agnew at Philadelphia yesterday to return to Washington at once to consider the matter. The president himself appears to be possessed with a morbid desire to get away—which can't be regarded as a good sign.

BLAINE CABLED LOWELL to-night as follows: The president has not gained to-day. He has had higher fever, which began earlier than is usual with his febrile rise. In the afternoon an incision was made in the swollen parotid gland by Hamilton. The flow of pus therefrom was small. The one favorable symptom of his swallowing liquid food with apparent relish and digestion has continued, but the general feeling up to midnight is one of increased anxiety.
