A GIRL'S NARROW ESCAPE. HER FRIENDS DID NOT THINK SHE COULD

A CASE WHERE THE EXPRESSION "SNATCHED PROPRIATELY USED—A STORY WORTHY OF A CAREFUL PERUSAL BY PARENTS. From the Penetanguishene Herald.

A few evenings ago a representative of the Herald while in conversation with Mr. James McLean, fireman on the steamer and Parry Sound, learned the particulars of a case which adds another to the long list of triumphs of a well-known Canadian remedy, and is of sufficient importance to deserve may prove to others. The case referred to A hush had fallen upon the listeners that the remarkable restoration to health of Mr. McLean's daughter Agnes, 13 years of was deemed almost impossible. Her blood had become impoverished, giving rise to palhad become impoverished, giving rise to pal-pitation of the heart, dizziness, severe headache, extremely pale complexion and general debility. At this period Miss McLean was residing in Midland, and her condition became so bad that she was finally compelled to take to her bed. A doctor was called in, but she did not improve under his treatment and another was then consulted, but without any better results. She had become so weak that her father had no hopes of her recovery and did not think she would live three months. The lady with whom Miss McLean was residing urged the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and flually a supply forth you were humming the tune of the gone an improvement could be noticed in hymn you have just sung. It is a curious fact that night is the time which nature utilizes for growth. Plants grow much more in the night than in the daytime, as can be proved any time by measurement. Measure a vine at night, then measure it again in the morning and the next night, and it will be found that the night growth is two or three times that accomplished during the day. During the day the plant is very busy gathering nourishment from various sources; and during the night this raw material is assimilated into the plant life. The same fact is true of the animal creation. Children grow more rapidly during the night. In the daytime while the child is awake and active, the system is kept husy disposing the waste consequent on this activity; but during sleep the system is free to extend its operation beyond the mere replacing of worn-out particles, hence the rapid growth. This is why so many invalids need so much rest and sleep The system has been taxed for years beyond its ability to repair the tissues, and hence the organism has become worn and disabled from the accumulation of waste products, and disease has resulted. With the proper conditions restored and a season of perfect rest, nature will reassert herself, clearing up the clogged and dirty tissues and restoring the organs to their normal condition.

Valuable vegetable remains are used in such a peculiar manner as to retain the full medicinal value of every ingredient. Don't begin with too many breeds. Select the one that best suits your surroundings and stick to it. By careful selection you can then build up a strain that will be satisfactory to yourself and patrons. Although a damp roosting place is an abomination, fowls prefer a wet roost free from vermin to a dry one that is infested with them. This may explain why some chickens prefer to roost on trees. Do not destroy eggs that have been deserted by the hen, or in cases where the incubator lamp has gone out and they have become cold. They often hatch a good percentage of strong chicks.

It may be taken as a very good rule that short legged fowls will fatten more rapidly than fowls "well up on their pins." This is important to the broiler raiser, whose object it is to get nice, plump birds as soon as Always keep shells and grit before your fowls, and for confined birds straw or refuse hay, cut about one-third inch long, should be furnished them. Besides the much-needed exercise obtained by scratching in it for seeds and grain, they will eat a large portion of it. Keep thoroughbred fowls only. There are enough breeds and enough sizes, shapes and colors for any purpose. With a mixed flock one cannot lay down any set of feeding rules or glean any reliable information from his statistics. In other words he never knows what he is at. The turkey is an industrious forager and picks up the greater portion of its food, therefore the difference in the weight of a large and small bird is an important matter bringing the actual cost of production down to a low sum when large and small weights are compared. More profit will be made from the poultry ousiness if poultrymen would find special stomers who would take their eggs reguto get them while they are perfectly fresh. Such customers are not hard to find in almost any town or even in small villages, and they are usually willing to pay a little mor than the regular store prices in order to get just what they want.

One should wait until the irritation subsides before corecting anyone. A reprimand given in the esence of others is apt to arouse a feeling of mortified pride that quite nullifies an imression that might otherwise be made, and it is an exceptional person that can be trusted to be the bearer of a scolding. It is apt o gather force en route. Argument b ween parents and children is unseemly, and it is always best to avoid letting the point of contest become too important. It is so much easier to live up to a good reputation than to live down a bad one that is strikingly illustrated in the story of "Lit- And-er-congratulation tle Lord Fauntleroy, 'where the stern grandfather is positively shamed into becoming almost the gentleman that his little grand son believes him.
