Indeed, if the opinion in well informed circles here is well founded, nearly every offer or concession proceeded from the side of the United States, the Canadians, as a rule, declining to commit themselves to any distinct proposition on the foregoing topics, the Alaskan boundary excepted. In fact, it is believed here that the distinct offer of concessions for a settlement came almost wholly from the United States commissioners.

Montreal Witness.

There is every reason to believe that cour terfeiters are causing a considerable number of spurious one dollar Dominion bank notes to be circulated in and about Montreal. At least five of the leading banks have received

The notes are of the Princess Louise issue, and bear the date of Montreal, June 1, 1878. They are printed on paper that bears all the appearance of having undergone considerable usage, and the ink in most cases is faded in usage, and the ink in most cases is faded in proportion. The paper is thin, and, to trained fingers, feels somewhat coarse; that soft, silky texture of the genuine note is wanting. The picture of the Princess Louise is badly executed, the profile being made up of almost straight lines, and presenting a foreshortened appearance.

The numbering of the notes is faulty, as in some the ink which is blue is of too bright a hue and does not present that faded appearance which would correspond with the rest of the note.

A MARCH TRIP

AT A MEMORABLE SESSION OF A JAMAICA LEGISLATURE.

AND TAXATION LAWS ARE SECURED IN THIS CROWN COLONY.

One of our friends in the importing trade of Kingston is very much exercised over the political manœvures of the rulers of this colony just now. Today, March 21st, the Governor prorogued the legislative council, the Jamaica house of parliament. It is summoned to meet again tomorrow at 2p. m. Interesting developments are looked for at this coming session, and it is expected that the Governor is about to adopt measures to defy the will of the people's representatives in some very important matters regarding the revenues of the colony. Our friend wishes us to attend this meeting, and volunteers to secure us a place among the specta-(Continued.)

teers to secure us a place among the specta-tors, though a crowd is looked for, as it is the talk everywhere, and business is almost suspended for the moment. When on our first visit to Port Antonia, suspended for the moment.

When on our first visit to Port Antonia, the other day, we heard the Jamaica tariff, and a proposed new tariff law, much talked of by the business men of the town. In this connection the financial position of the island and the recent actions of the home government in regard thereto, came in for a share of attention. It seems that the financial sfairs of the colony have been, not only in a strained condition, but the accounts were not inteligible. Recently Sir David Barbour, an experienced accountant, an adept in revenue matters, was given the accounts to investigate, straighten out, and propose a scheme for future guidance. Knowledge of an alarming state of the finances of the country and the necessity for outside aid to unravel the tangle of what is claimed to be the miserable and inefficient management of the Colonial Secretary, the Hon. Fred S. Evans, C. M. G., naturally aroused the intelligent of the people. At this juncture came a dispatch from the Secretary of State for the colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, placing the blame of the extravagance of the government upon the members of the council, elected by the people. Then followed the news of the government's proposal to make a horizontal raise of the tariff upon imports, from 16% to 20%, and to put implements used in agriculture from the free list to that of the dutiable. These matters were approaching the acute stage when we were at Port Antonia. Very great was the indig to that of the dutiable. These matters were approaching the acute stage when we were are approaching the acute stage when we were at Port Autonia. Very great was the indignation expressed by many of the business people. Anything antagonistic to British rule, or having a tendency to weaken the loyalty of the people, of course, could be made much of at that port, where so much of the industry and income of the place is depending upon a wealthy company of foreigners, the Boston Fruit Co., and upon an export to a foreign country, the United States. One man compared Joeeph Chamberlain to Judas Iscariot, "a man who had promised great things for the colonies but did nothing." Gladstone, by way of comparison, was second only to our Saviour. Legislation had about reached the stage of a deadlock by the time we reached Kingston on account of the elected members, 11, all opposing the government scheme for increased revenue.

The government of Jamaica receives its powers in a very different way from that of Canada, or Newfoundland, or indeed of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick before Confederation. The Governor of Jamaica is not only Governor, but he is virtually Premier and President of the Legislative Council, the only governing body. The ex-officio members—the Commander of the forces, the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney General, the Director of Public Works, and the Collector General—receive their appointment lector General—receive their appointment direct from the crown. Then there are six others called "nominated members," who are chosen by the Governor from time to time when vacancies occur. This forms the time when vacancies occur. This forms the government.

As an advisory board, the thirteen parishes into which the island is divided, may elect fourteen. At the present time three of these seats are vacant, owing to their representatives becoming disqualified. To fill one of these seats an election is to take place in a few days. The government has its regular strength of numbers but it requires a majority of votes to carry a measure in any case, and if nine of the elected members oppose a measure it fails to pass unless the Governor considers "paramount interests are at stake."

considers "paramount interests are at stake," and gives to himself the powers to overrule their decision. This is a dangerous expedient and rarely resorted to. And this is what it is feared he is about to do. It is the afternoon of the 22nd and by one o'clock we are approaching "Head Quarters House," the legislative council chamber. House," the legislative council cnamber. There seems to be a general movement in that direction. On arrival we find that the chamber is so full that only those who have previously secured the privilege can enter; and the broad verands in front is full of and the broad veranda in front is full of electors expecting to witness a fray. Fortuntely for these latter the council chamber and the veranda where they are are upon one level, and the large windows between must remain open for air. In a very few minutes after our arrival the gates are closed so that the great crowd which seems to be gathering may not be able to concentrate its force too near the object of its ire. A good force of colored police too are on hand to do the will of the powers that be, leaving the thoughts of the powers that may be, for later consideration.

The audience is about equally divided between whites and blacks. Outside, two-thirds are blacks. The negroes, who seem to be in official positions, compare very favorably with their contemporaries. Altogether it is not an unintelligent audience by ny means.

Directly the Colonial Secretary and the Directly the Colonial Secretary and the Attorney General arrive. If these are men of the ability necessary for the control of the difficult problems of their positions their appearances belie them. We hear no boom of cannon, or the sound of approaching music, or the tread of soldiers such as we are accustomed to hear in Canada at the approach of a Governor to open a session of parliament. Only a little extra stir at the doorway, and the Commander of the Forces enters and he Commander of the Forces enters and then the Governor accompanied by a few minor officials.

minor officials.

The Governor looks careworn and anxious. We know he distinguished himself as a soldier, but we do not believe he is fitted for this position, and we would like him better for a Governernor if he discarded that eyeglass, though Joseph Chamberlain does use one.

one.

Every available member of this legislative body is present. The minutes of a previous meeting are read and confirmed. The Colonial Secretary reads the Covernor's address apprising the Assembly of his reasons for calling them together as meeting are read and confirmed. The Colonial Secretary reads the Governor's address apprising the Assembly of his reasons for calling them together so soon again. He stated that he had acquainted the Secretary of State for the colonies of what had transpired regarding the tariff, and that he had replied that he—the governor—should "take the necessary steps to secure the first reading of the bill." He says: "it was impossible that I should suffer these affairs to drift into a position which would be detrimental to the best interests of the people, and would go far to dislocate and paralyze the whole machinery of government." Who was to blame for the present condition of affairs and how to be remedied are the all important questions. However, the Governor soon apprises the audience of what his course is to be, for it is found in the following paragraph; "It was therefore clearly my duty to carry out without hesitation the wishes of the Secretary of State and to put in force the extraordinary and special powers reserved to me in cases of necessity by the constitution." The glances which are exchanged between the members and the air of contempt with which this announcement is received by the majority of the audience does not bode well for peace. But not a semblance of indecorum is noticed while the address is being submitted. At the end, Mr. Stern, the member for Kingston, wishes to ask some questions as to the order of their tariff proceedings. This, it seems, is equivalent to calling in question the propriety of the course now likely to be taken by the government. The precident decides that he cannot ask questions without notice.

Mr. Burk, a negro member, rises to speak. He is greeted from official quarters with cries of "Order."

Mr. Berry, another negro elected member: "Not so much order this time. We are not going to have quite so much order this time."

Official Benches: "Order! order!"

Mr. Burk: "I desire to ask your Excellency whether I may not, before any quertion of swearing in Hon. members arises, move

Ministerial Benches: "Order! order!"
Mr. Burk: "I am not going to be put down until your Excellency rules me out of order. I want to know whether it is not competent for me to move at once a resolution relative to the swearing in of new members, as a practical protest,"
"No!" Mr. Berry: "Who says no?"
The Colonial Secretary: "I say no, because the standing order declares that hon. members shall be sworn in on presenting themselves to be sworn."
The Presidents "No resolution can be brought in by the hon. members now."
