Boston, July 4.—For the first time since Independence day has been celebrated in this city, the Wourth of July was ushered in at midnight is silence. When the clocks in the City proclaimed that the holiday had begue not a sound was heard other than these that would be heard at midnight on any other night in the year. Since the noisy evening preceding the celebration of the anaiversary of the battle of Sunker Hill, on June 17, Judge Wm. H. Emmons, chairman of the Boston Police Cemmissioners, has labored assiduously for a quiet might before the holiday, and he succeeded.
