

"I saw a scientific note the other day," observed the professor, "to the effect that the oak furnishes a home for 309 species of insects."

"That's very kind of the oak," said P-tts dryly, "but it can't compete with a Muskoka mission boarding house."

A. W-k-r—"What is the surest sign of spring weather?"

A. D. McK—"That delightful feeling that makes you want to sit down and watch somebody else work."

School of Pedagogy. C-c-l Lav-l—"Well, but Dr. McL-n, don't you think — —?"

Dr. McL-n—"Nonsense, sir, perfect nonsense. Where in the world did you study philosophy?"

Overheard at the Queen's-'Varsity match when Hartly was scoring a goal: "I'm just in love with that man Curtis. He knows his place so well and never stirs out of it."

W-nd-l to McC-n-l—"If a man were to marry his step-mother's half-sister's second cousin, what relation would she be to him?"

McC-n-l—"Give it up."

W-nd-l—"His wife, sure."

H-g-r at A.M.S. "But to return to the point I started from—I'm lost in an amazing labyrinth of intricacies."

Prof. in Botany class—"Here is a plant with a pod much resembling the shepherd's purse."

Tud—"Because its empty, sir?"

Prof. K—, (picking up a lead pencil)—"What do you do, Mr. S-t, with anything you find here?"

Irving S—"Put 'em in your pocket, sir."

T-dh-e (at kinematograph exhibition, when some small boys were making themselves obnoxious behind)—"Reach back, Henry, and help yourself to one of those kids."

HOW TO KILL A COLLEGE PAPER.

Don't subscribe. Don't ever contribute. Find fault with the literary part of the programme. Complain and say mean things to the editor. Make him do all the work. If you have been asked to write up the party, say that you can't. Never hand the editor a local; he might think that you are working for a position on the staff. Never speak to anyone concerning the paper, and if anyone speaks to you concerning it, squelch the subject at once.—Ex.
