mills. Whatever happens in the export trade the domestic trade should occupy the provincial production. This is the consensus of opinion of those in the best position to judge of the future. The products of agriculture and fishing are insured a ready market at prices which, though profitable, cannot possibly be considered as meaning profiteering. General manufacturing and industrial production apart from the basic industries is dependent upon local demands and competition from eastern and foreign sources and are, in consequence, subject to the conditions obtaining elsewhere and for that reason uncertain. However, the new industry of shipbuilding has reached its peak apparently and unless the government takes a hand the building of steel ships will be a thing of the past on completion of present orders.
