

- Canada also hosts and funds Convergence, a platform to promote blended financing by public, private and philanthropic partners. Blended financing blends public and private capital to finance development goals, increase the effects of international development investments and achieve sustainable results. The platform encourages information to be shared, public and private investors to connect, and structured finance models to be piloted.
- Canada supports international tax cooperation through projects to enhance tax administration and revenue collection for domestic revenue mobilization in developing countries. Canada is a member of the Steering Committee of the Addis Tax Initiative. This initiative was created following the UN's 2015 Addis Ababa Action Agenda to improve the efficiency of domestic tax systems. Canada is on track to double its support for international tax cooperation and capacity building.

Seventeen SDGs are underpinned by 169 targets and 232 indicators. These indicators were developed by the Inter-agency and Expert Group on Sustainable Development Goal Indicators (IAEG-SDGs), a group established by the UN Statistical Commission. To help track progress, this group has been developing an indicator framework to monitor the 2030 Agenda's goals and targets globally, and support the agenda's implementation.

Statistics Canada is playing a key role in this. It is collaborating with the UN and other national statistical offices to develop the indicator framework. In March 2017, Statistics Canada hosted a meeting of the IAEG-SDGs in Ottawa that included sessions on data disaggregation and the role of custodian agencies. Statistics Canada also attended technical events on data collection at the July 2017 High-Level Political Forum. This event included key presentations by Canada's chief statistician.

A UN working group proposed indicators for the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction's global targets. The Sendai Framework was created following the 2015 Third UN World Conference on Disaster Risk Reduction. It has seven targets and four priorities for action. Public Safety Canada and Global Affairs Canada were members of the UN working group. These indicators were integrated into the global indicator framework for the SDGs.

The 2030 Agenda Indicator Framework built on the work of the IAEG-SDGs and national statistical offices such as Statistics Canada. The UN Economic and Social Council later adopted this framework by consensus. Subsequently, the UN General Assembly approved the framework in the summer of 2017.

The 2030 Agenda is a universal agenda. The Government of Canada supports this global effort and is also committed to realizing this ambitious agenda domestically and internationally.
