Mrs. Sarah Muir Asks Unstated

Damages, Claiming Negligence

in Starting Car.

In the jury assize court before Chancellor Boyd, Mrs. Sarah Muir is suing the Toronto Street Railway Co. for unstated damages. Mrs. Muir was a passenger on a College street car last August. Opposite the Hospital for Sick Children a man boarded the car.

He had to pass Mrs. Muir to get a seat, and as he did so the car started with a sudden jerk. The man was thrown against her, with the result that she was seriously injured.

She alleges that negligence was shown in the way the car was started, while the railway company contend that the action is barred because it was not brought to the courts within six months.

Bands of Sable and Black Jet Buttons Are the Thing.

Practically all the newly-launched afternoon frocks exploit a combination of chiffon or sherest crepe, with soft satin or a rather stiff taffeta. Rather pretty effects are secured by the use of pannier sections of chiffon bordered with fur and mounted over woluminous skirt of the silk. A few square cut necks are coming into favor, but always outlined with trimming bands of fur. One very graceful frock, emphasizing the peasant bodice, was developed in crow's wing blue golden rod satin. The bodice but tons tightly down the centre front with black cat jet novelty buttons and the sides extend into long sash ends, which pass about the figure under the arms and tie softly at the back. The sleeves of the chiffon fit into very large bound armholes and are cuffed with sable bands, below which are sleeves of the chiffon fit into pleated frills of the satin.

"'No Irish need apply' should be placed in the specifications if no contracts are to be awarded to Irish Roman Catholics, separate school supporters, in Toronto when non-resident Roman Catholic firms with English names are given contracts," said Trustee Brown at the board of education last night. The issue was raised by Trustee McTaggart's motion to reject the approved tender of W. J. McGuire of $29,500 for the plumbing and heating of the new Park school, and to give the contract to Purdy and Mansell, whose tender was $492 higher than W. J. McGuire.

Trustee Brown said that a non-resident Roman Catholic firm was recently given a much larger contract by the board.

Chairman Hodgson said that he opposed the McGuire tender because the firm supported the separate schools.

The McGuire tender was rejected by a vote of 7 to 6, and that of Purdy and Mansell substituted.

The address of welcome to the visiting delegates was given by Mrs Huestis, president of the local council, who dwelt on the support that had been derived from the national body. She also referred to the co-operation given by the municipal council, who she felt sure had always the words of Lady Aberdeen in mind, when on a former occasion she had spoken of the women's council as "a sort of official wife of corporations." Mrs. Huestis made special reference to the progress of technical education in Canada, and that the woman's side is receiving the large share it is in the splendid new technical school, she attributed to the fine efforts of the late Mrs. Hoodless of Hamilton.

The occasion of his return to Norway after eleven years' absence, at the age of 57, gave him the experience which stirred him to his ventures in realism. The government and the parliament of the time were in violent opposition, and when the students desired to honor him with a torchlight procession he repelled them, thinking that the reactionaries were trying to capture him. When he left the country the other party claimed him and he could find no words to express his indignation. His doubt of democracy was in its failure to display nobility of character, which he thought could only be brought in by women and labor. These views lay behind the composition of "Rosmersholm." The mingled motives behind human deeds which cannot be torn apart are shown by Ibsen in this play.
