Author of "Henry of Navarre," etc., etc.

A rattling good story of love and intrigue in good old Ireland in the days and for the cause of Charles the Rover.

"Of all the days that's in the year
The tenth of June I love most dear,
When sweet white roses do appear
For sake of Charles the Rover."

"Our noble Ormond, he is drest,
A rose is glancing at his breast;
His famous hounds have doffed his crest,
White roses deck them over."
