Conservative gossip yesterday in political circles concentrated on The World's proposal that a convention of the party be called to organize a new platform after the manner of the Whitney platform of 1904, which swep: the country. The fact that The Telegram also came in on the proposal on Thursday afternoon gave the gossipers an added stimulus. Up in the parliament buildings little was to be learned, but down town it was felt that ground had been broken in a new direction, and everybody was following the lead. Pasticularly in the Albany Club, where the Whitney poincies were all hatched out, was the oalert attention.

Shrewd politicians realized that the Homer whiskey deal in the hands or a capable critic might develop in, an affair to rival the Minnie M., and a affair to rival the Minnie M., and to has been recognized for some time that the government has been falling into the comatose weakness which preceded the fall of the Ross administration. It was this sense of frailty that induced Albany Club adherence to the suggestion, not too popular in that quarter, of co-opting Dr. Cody.
