Paris, Oct. 17. - Josephine Lecrere, a lady's maid in the service of a family in the Rue du Chateau d'Eau, has been subjected to a terrible ordeal. Recently her master moved to a fresh flat, and yesterday, having to accompany the young daughter of the family to a music lesson, Josephine went upstairs to the sixth floor-which is the servants' flat-to dress. She had just entered the room when a masked man sprang out from the wardrobe and seized her by the throat. In the prisoner she recognized her sweetheart, Baptiste Ressier, whom she had known for two years as a locksmith, and who was to lead her to the altar shortly. Ressier, who appears to have attacked the woman in ignorance of her identity, is said to be a notorious criminal.
