WILLIAM FARNUM IN "LES MISERABLES," AT PATRICIA THEATRE ON MON., TUES., WED

Photoplay Is Based Upon Victor Hugo's Immortal Story of the Life of Jean Valjean—Interpretation of This Character Said To Be Farnum's Best.

Just as Victor Hugo's world classic "Les Miserables" is the strongest human story ever written, so William Farnum's faithful screen adaptation of that master production coming to the Patricia Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, is without question the most absorbing film drama in years. William Farnum, famous for his interpretation of rugged roles, appears as Jean Valjean. Frank Lloyd is the director.
The whole play revolves about the suffering and the sacrifice of Jean Valjean, a young peasant of Southern France, who is condemned to the converted to the cause of right. His conscience becomes his guide.

Lives Under Assumed Name.
Through the years that follow, Jean Valjean lives under an assumed name, his life is pursued, and he is loved and respected as a good citizen of the community. His philanthropy and benevolence cause him to be known throughout the district, and he is elected mayor of his town. Then he hears that a man has been arrested as Jean Valjean, the ex-convict. Jean is torn between the desire to do what he believes he should and the desire to let the past be buried now forever. After an all-night struggle with himself, he decides to renounce his life of respectability. He makes known his real identity to the authorities. He is arrested once more, but his odious cunning manifests itself again, and he escapes.
For many years he evades pursuit. He adopts a little girl, the daughter of a young worker in the jet factory, which he owned in Marseilles, and who died at the time of his arrest. This girl is Cosette, who later falls in love with Marius, a dashing revolutionary leader of Paris. Though he knows that he is sacrificing his own happiness and the one he loves with his whole soul, Jean Valjean goes at the risk of his life among the fighters in the streets of Paris, rescues the wounded Marius and brings him back to Cosette. Valjean also finds his own peace of mind from the day he was first sent to the galleys. In return for this generous and unexpected action, Javert afterwards gives Jean his own freedom.
The last years of Valjean's life are spent in loneliness and poverty. He has abandoned everything that Cosette and her Marius may want. The two find him one evening sobbing softly in the big chair in which he sits, with the little ragged doll that Cosette once wore as a child. They understand then, but it is too late.
The great heart slowly broken—and Jean Valjean has passed on.

BILLIE RHODES IN DELIGHTFUL COMEDY AT THE PATRICIA

Dainty Screen Comedienne Is Appearing in "The Girl of My Dreams."

There is a boldness of conception and execution about the new Billie Rhodes picture offering, "The Girl of My Dreams," which appeals with especial force to a public overfed on spy plots and the horrors of war. Happily enough, for Miss Rhodes is first of all a comedienne, there is a strong comedy vein to the play—a kind of clean-cut, open-faced comedy that suits Billie Rhodes thoroughly well. The Rhodes comedy is of the subtle sort, devoid of obvious devices to raise a laugh, yet always sure of hilarious approval.
The play is from a story by William Nesbit. The photography and direction are alike admirable.
The story is replete with the glamour of mountain life, the innocent pleasures of mountaineers, and it deals especially with the carefree existence of "The Weeds," a beautiful girl grown up amid the crags to young womanhood.
Of course, the culmination is a happy ending to the mountain maid's romantic love affair, and the details of this romance make one of the most attractive pictures screened for some time.

Larry Semon Comedy at the Patricia Next Thursday, Friday, Saturday.
Vita-graph's first Larry Semon Comedy has been completed, and the few fortunate ones who have viewed the same declare with one voice that it is the last word in the feature comedy field. "Well, I'll Be —" is far removed from the usual slapstick variety. It is a rip-roaring, rough house comedy with a plot and carried to a

A Food For Every Part of Your System

The human system requires certain minerals, starches, etc. Without them, man cannot live. The ingredients from which high-quality bread is made—wheat, malt, sugar, salt, water, shortening and milk—contain practically every mineral and starch necessary to maintain life.

Parnell's Breads

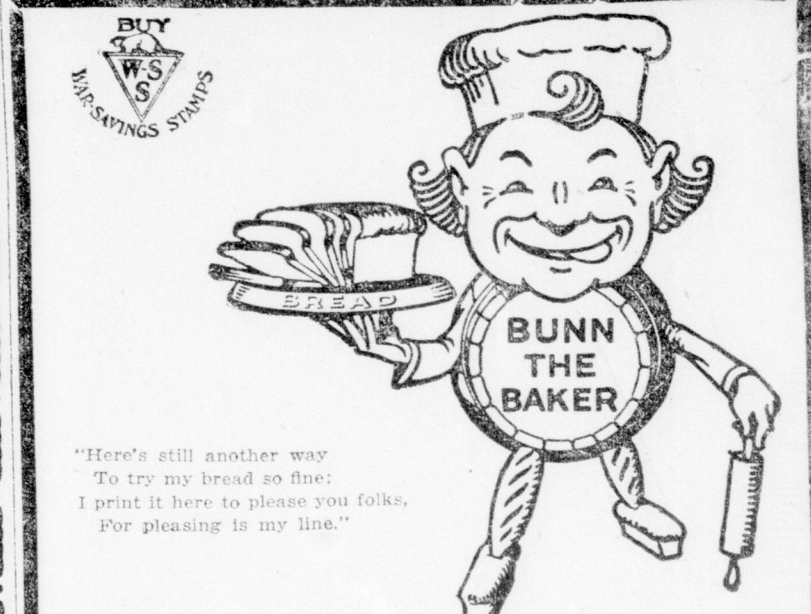

Made of the finest of Mother Nature's gifts to man, including wheat, which furnishes the system with proteids to create albumen and carbohydrates; malt, a product of grain, which creates an appetite and acts as a system builder; sugar, made from sugar cane or beet root, which provides stimulant for the system; salt, a mineral which helps with the digestion of proteids, together with water, which contains hydrogen and oxygen, and shortening and milk, which provide fats.

Eminent dietitians claim that man can exist solely on bread. Consider all these wonderful body-building elements in bread, and add to them the skill and cleanliness with which Parnell's is manufactured and delivered, and you will have some conception of what it means to your family to insist upon Parnell's Bread for every meal. Parnell's manufacture so many varieties of bread, there's one to suit every taste. Better order a trial loaf today.

Bunn the Baker of Bana-Boo

Try a Club Sandwich, Made With

NEAL'S

Take medium thin slices of NEAL'S ALOAFA BREAD and toast well.
Then make a sandwich as follows: Slice of toast, lettuce, white meat of chicken, lettuce, slice of toast, lettuce, strips of bacon (fried medium), slices of tomato, lettuce, slice of toast.

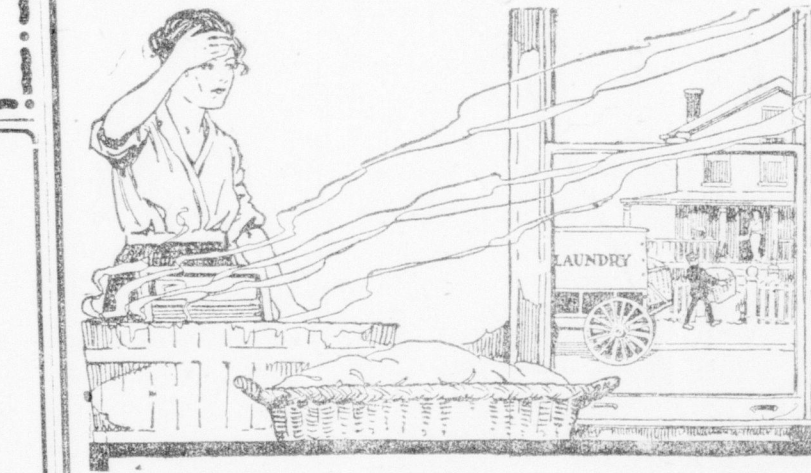

There are endless varieties of club sandwiches, but the above is one of the simplest and best. It makes a most delightful luncheon dish or a novelty when you have visitors. Cold roast veal will do nicely in place of the chicken, if necessary.
Just make this with NEAL'S BREAD some time for the family, and they'll go wild over your choice. Order from your grocer or let us send a bread salesman, who will arrange to call daily.
