ORGANIZER MARSH TELLS OF PROGRESS OF THE G. A. C.

Hyman Hall.

There was a full attendance of local members of Victory Post of the Grand Army of Canada at the general meeting held last night at 380 Richmond street. Comrade H. Wray presided, and before Organizer J. F. Marsh addressed the meeting final arrangements were made for the mass meeting which will be held tonight in Hyman Hall to discuss the "Soldiers Movement!" and the the "Soldier's Movement" and the "Gratuity Question." All old members of Victory Post were present as well as number of new members.

The address of Organizer Marsh dealt detail with the progress of the G. A. C. which, he stated has not a paid-up membership of 40,000. Since Mr. Marsh came to London a few days ago 35 new members have been added to Victory Arrangements have been made for a

Arrangements have been made for a membership drive in the city which will be thoroughly canvassed in a spirit of unity and co-operation with all other veterans' associations.

This spirit of unity and co-operation was an outstanding feature of Comrade Marsh's address, and he urged the necessity of it in order that returned soldiers should present a solid front in pressing their desires.

Comrade Marsh outlined his experiences on parliamentary committee at Ottawa, when the gratuity question was before the House last fall. He told also of the gratuity petitions which are being signed from coast to coast and which will be waiting signatures here at the mass meeting to-state the single property of the pressing their desires.

G. H. LEICHLITER, PASTOR-EVANGELIST AN IMPRESSION, BY JOSEPH WEARING

The following appreciation is taken from Thursday's edition of the Peterhoro Examiner. Rev. G. H. Leichliter, the subject of this sketch, is the pastor of Adelaide Street Baptist Church, and well known in Lonaon.

Professionalism evangelism has without doubt fallen into disrepute. The last two attempts to stage a campaign for a professional evangelist in this city turned out to be practically failures if the truth be told. There is a general feeling that those men are in the business and with a sharp eye to the collections. Moreover their manner of presenting the truth is to many people crude and unconvincing and to some people offensive and impious.

We have in the city at the present time, however, a man who, while a regular and singularly successful pastor.

is especially gifted in the presentation of the Gospel message in the manner usually designated as evangelistic, so gifted indeed that the people of Adelaide Street Church, London, have the greatest slightly than the control of the meeting him for the first time is the winning smile and easy manner so true of the South, coupled with the soft Southern accent, with the broad "a" sound not too pronounced, but just sufficiently so to give the music to the voice that is so lacking in our northern speech. There is nothing to indicate the orator. You have simply a few bire headern was a lad of the south of the sou to, which would entail another controversy.

"It is better in my opinion, to get something definite on which to work.

"If we want to give the street railway
a perpetual franchise in London, no
more effective course can be pursued than to have the present agreement set aside by the Legislature. I will not support any such move."

There is nothing to indicate the orator. You have simply a fine, big, handsome grown up lad of about thirty, who charms you with his personality at once.
But what a man he is on the platform! He is indeed a dual personality.
To listen to him sing is to listen to one with a golden voice and a throabing heart. It is the wood-note wild, the song which comes from a throat attuned to God and a heart attuned to hand to have the present agreement set aside by the Legislature. I will not
support any such move."

What strikes the hearer, too, is that borderer on composed h patches of eloquence with which his address abounds, is of that quality that it really transcends common speech and enters into that higher realm that we call poetry. And his art, while natural, is perfect. Sometimes his message pours forth in trumpet tones; at other times he whispers law; mineral words. It is

Mr. Leichliter is typical of the Southern States, where he was born of an old Southern family that originally hailed from bonnie Scotland. It is a source of amusement to him that his name is sometimes mistaken for a German name, though anyone hearing it pronounced would recognize it as Scotch at once.

What instantly captivates one meeting him for the first time is the winning smile and easy manner so

As a speaker, Mr. Leitchliter is noth as a speaker, Mr. Leitenmer is noti-ing short of an orator with that vehe-ment simplicity which is the highest type of eloquence. If as Aristotle says, rhetoric is a science of persuading, then the man from the south is a scientist what strikes the hearer, too, is that the man is a born poet, and it has been said that the poet is the nearest borderer on the orator. Not that he composed hymned verse! But his prose, particularly in the purple patches of eloquence with which his oddrags absorbed in 6, that quality beautiful day visions to place every-thing in the most effective light, Like Spurgeon, too, he makes his meaning
