Pure white is considered very trying by experts, who advise cream, but the average man likes pure white better than anything else on his women folk. Grey is almost as trying as black, and should be softened in the same way. It suits women with a very high cofor. Only clear-skinned brunettes, or very fair women should wear bright red in mass, but a sallow skin is often relieved by a dash of it in the right place. Women who are neither very dark nor very fair, but who have clear skins, usually look well in green. Yellow, In an evening gown, is full of light and suggests sunshine, but cannot be used with a heavy skin. Blue in some shade is the old reliable, and is becoming to

Voile Blouses to take the place of Georgette

ANY predict that the fine Voile Blouse will this year replace Georgette, You would think so to see the stunning models we have just received. Never before have there been such fine wells. before have there been such fine voile Blouses, and the designs have in many cases copied the more expensive Georgettes. Some are made of a very fine imported mercerized Voile which is proving very popular. It washes wonderfully well, has the sheen of Georgette and comes in just as dressy effects as the more expensive silk material.

To-morrow we are making a special offering of a large variety of styles, featuring embroidered fronts both in self and pastel shades. Many others are plain, but trimmed with beautiful laces. Either the long or elbow sleeves may be had. One very dainty model has a plaited bell sleeve and is very chic. All Sizes
