Pat May Lose Control,

But Not John McGraw

Chicago. Aug. 9.—The apparent col-lapse of the world's champion Cincinnati Reds is causing a lot of speculation among the baseball bugs. Undoubtedly the Reds still have the most powerful machine in their league, and they have Patrick Moran. But it would seem that Patrick has lost his hold on the control, and that the machine is running amuck because of internal dissension. Unless this is stopped the Reds will be over-thrown and the Giants may win the pen-nant.

ant. John J. McGraw, who was a trifle lugubrious about the chances of the Giants early in the year, now sees the pennant within his grasp, and is instill-ing some of the old drive into the Giants, while the Brooklyn Dodgers are fighting hard at the front. The contest between the baseball genius of McGraw and Mo-ran is an unequal one from the start. While Moran may lose control of his men, McGraw never will do that. He will rur his team as long as he wants to. There is no insubordination in any team controlled by McGraw. And every basebal team should be controlled in the same way.
