Mr. Fowler made the presentation.

GREAT WARSHIPS ARE BEING BUILT FOR BRITISH NAVY

(By Herbert Temple, of the International News.) Great Britain is to amaze the world with several warships of a new type, as much above the super-Dreadnoughts as that is above the Dreadnought. Admiral Jellicoe will be able to lay down a hand on the playing table of the North Sea next summer at which the Kaiser's navy will stare in astonishment. These new ships are of the Queen Elizabeth class, not one of which is yet in commission. Details of them are carefully guarded, and publication of facts concerning them is the latest naval secret. From a friend who recently visited the Admiralty, I have obtained a layman's view of one of these giant craft. She was the Waspette, which will be ready for action within six months.

The Waspette will carry ten 15-5 inch guns. What this means can be realized when it is recalled that the latest American battleship, carry only 14-inch guns. Even more important is the wonderful turret arrangement. The turret rises above each other like boxes in a grandstand, so that it is possible to fire all of her 15.5 guns from her bow. This is an achievement of which naval construction would have despaired only yesterday.

More wonderful still, this monster floating fort is not unable to pursue swift cruisers. She makes twenty-six knots, a speed greater than the fastest transatlantic liner. Her bow is narrow at the water line and widens in such a way as to offer the least possible resistance to the seas.

Another important feature is her armament. It is said she will be able practically to defy any ordinary torpedo or mine. This is accomplished by means of triple columns of armor below the water line. An external explosion can damage, but not sink her. Of course she is oil driven. Her cost will be about $16,000,000.

There are six such ships building which are expected to shake out their colors within six months. Construction costs so far organized that it is estimated they can be built in eighteen months from the time they were started. I am unable to learn whether all, or only one, of the new battleships will be able to fire all of its large guns from the bow. I am informed, however, that the Devonport and Portsmouth dockyards alone are to produce eight battleships next spring or early summer. At Devonport 8,000 men are employed, with about 500 soldiers and marines always on guard. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, recently said in the House of Commons that Great Britain could lose a super-Dreadnought every month for twelve months without diminishing her relative superiority over the German navy, even though the Germans kept all their ships intact. From what I learn, this was no idle boast.

They Were Without Guile Men were deceivers, and they were on the same side electric car, at least once a day. Each had completed the morning's work and was heading homeward for lunch.

When the car was within three blocks of the point where they were to alight, one of them pulled out a pair of gloves and began hurriedly to put them on. The other followed suit, remarking "Funny, but you are so near home, why the gloves?" was the reply. "My wife insists that I shall wear them. I carry them in my pocket until I am near home, wear them into the house and thus present prima facie evidence that I have obeyed orders."

"I do exactly the same thing," said the other deceiver. Then they both looked at their glove-clad hands and grinned as they nudged each other.
