

KING OPENS EXHIBITION AT WEMBLEY, ENG.

"The dominions, India, the colonies, the protectorates and the mandate territories under your care have joined together in the great task of presenting the picture of your commonwealth of nations."
"The exhibition is thus the work of the whole empire, and it shows the craftsmanship and agricultural skill, the trading and transportation organizations of all our peoples and all our territories."
"It gives also a living picture of the history of the empire and its present structure. It will suggest to the world, I truly believe, that the most powerful agency of civilization has its heart set upon peaceful aims and the good of mankind."

"The lighter side of the organization of a great exhibition has not been neglected. It is essential to the success of an enterprise such as this that it should be attractive, that it should encourage the desire for amusement as well as for education. Sports, entertainments, music and arrangements for the comfort of our visitors have been carefully planned."

Results Hoped For

"As president I wish to express my gratitude to those who have helped in this great undertaking—to those men of great vision who are responsible for the first proposal for the exhibition, made before the war to the representatives of the dominions, of India and the colonies."

"The great work has been carried through with splendid loyalty and energy. I hope, Sir, that the result of this exhibition will be to impress vividly upon all the peoples of your empire the advice you have given to them on more than one occasion—that they should be fully awake to their responsibilities as heirs of so glorious an heritage and that they should be in a position to develop the resources of the empire for the benefit of the British race, for the benefit of those other races which have accepted our guardianship over their destinies, and for the benefit of mankind generally."

The King's Speech

In reply, the King said:
"It gives me the greatest pleasure and satisfaction to come here with the Queen for the purpose of opening the British Empire Exhibition. Our heartiest congratulations are due to the board of management, to the executive council and to all who have worked with and under them for the marvelous organization and industry, which produced this triumphant result."
"I am happy to welcome the representatives, official and unofficial, of my dominions beyond the seas, and to express the pleasure we all feel that they are taking part in today's opening ceremony."

"You have said that your object has been to produce a picture of our commonwealth of nations. No one can doubt that this has been fully attained. The exhibition may be said to represent to us the whole empire in little, containing within its 220 acres of ground a vivid model of the architecture, art and industry of all the races which come under the British flag."
"It represents to the world a graphic illustration of that spirit of free and tolerant co-operation which inspired peoples of different races, creeds and ways of thought, to unite in a single commonwealth and contribute their varying national gifts to one great end."

Is Stock Taking

"This exhibition will enable us to take stock of the resources, actual and potential, of the empire as a whole, and to consider where these exist and how they can best be developed and utilized; to take counsel together as to how the peoples can co-operate to supply one another's needs and promote the national well-being."
"It stands for co-ordination of our scientific knowledge and common effort to overcome disease, and to better the difficult conditions which still surround life in many parts of the empire."

"Think for example of the scientific work accomplished in recent years for the prevention and treatment of tropical diseases. And it is easy to imagine how greatly the exhibition will bring tribute toward the progress of our tropical territories and development of the unexplored capacities of the empire."

"Our thoughts go back to the great exhibition of 1851 associated for all time with the memories of Queen Victoria and her Prince Consort and the brilliant hopes of the growth of international peace and friendship with which it was inaugurated."

"Our object here is not quite so ambitious and for that very reason is perhaps more hopeful of attainment. We believe the exhibition will bring the peoples of the empire to a better knowledge of how to meet their reciprocal wants and aspirations, and, where brotherly feeling and the habit of united action already exist, the growth of inter-imperial trade will make the bonds of sympathy yet closer, and stronger."

The Family Estate

"Business relations between strangers may or may not lead to friendship; co-operation between brothers for better development of the family estate can hardly fail to promote family affection."

"And we hope further that the success of the exhibition may bring lasting benefits not to the empire only, but to mankind in general. No nation or group of nations can isolate itself from the main stream of modern commerce, and if this exhibition leads to greater development of the material resources of the empire and expansion of trade, it will at the same time be aiding the economic life of the world from the disorganization caused by the war."

"I declare the British Empire Exhibition open, and I pray that by the blessing of God it may conduce to the unity and prosperity of all my peoples and to the peace and well-being of the world."
