Who ever Heard it?

There is or used to be, a cunning wag of a fellow in Brunswick, Maine, who had a know-nothing kind of look outside, but inside was full of all manner of vitty conceits and cuteness. One day an honest old Quakser came into town with a load of hay for sale Tappan wanted it, and though he was 'out of money, ordered it pitched off into the barn. This dorfe, Broadbrim came round to the shop after the pay.

'Can't pay you'to-day, uncle,—no money.

But friend Tappan, thee shoeld have told me of this before.'
