

JANUARY bath 31 days.

1855

The insect, that, with puny wing,
Just shoots along one summer ray;
The floweret, which the breath of spring
Wakes into life for half a day;
The smallest mite, the slenderest hair,
All feel our common father's care.

Even from the glories of his throne
He bends, to view this wandering hall;
Sees all, as if that all were one;
Loves one, as if that one were all;
Rolls the swift planets in their spheres,
And counts the sinner's lonely tears.

The stream of Life.—Life bears us on like the stream of a mighty River. Our Boat, at first, glides down the narrow channel, thro' the playful murmurings of the little brook, and the winds of its grassy border. The trees shed the blossoms over our young heads; the flowers of the brink seem to offer themselves to our young hands; we are happy in hope, and grasp eagerly at the beauties around us; but the stream hurries on, and still our hands are empty. Our course in youth and manhood is along a wider and deeper flood, and amid objects more striking and magnificent. We are animated by the moving picture of enjoyment and industry which passes before us; we are excited by some short-lived success, or rendered
