TRAFFICKING IN TREASON

LORD CHURCHILL'S MANIFESTO OF VITUPERATION.

The G. O. M. Held Up to Senseless Ridicule—An Attempt to Fan the Heat of Party Passion Into Disastrous Flame—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach Also Unbosoms Himself.

LONDON, June 20.—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach addressed the electors of Bristol yesterday. He said the Government schemes would be dishonorable to Great Britain and disastrous to Ireland and must lead to separation or civil war. Political organizations cannot, he said, be permitted to seek their ends through intimidation backed by outrage and crime. The preveation of this is not coercion, but is vindication of constitutional freedom. The political instincts of Ireland cannot be satisfied by plans for depriving her sons of a full share in the government of the Empire. Concessions would only promote further disintegration. In such a crisis old dividing party lines ought to be forgotten and one great effort made to preserve that unity upon which depends the strength of the Empire.

Chamberlain and His Constituents.

LONDON, June 19.—Mr. Chamberlain, in an open air meeting, addressed his constituents at Birmingham. The audience was lively, and sometime uproarious, but a motion approving of Mr. Chamberlain's candidature was carried by a large majority. In his address, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"I am glad at least to have an opportunity to meet the electors face to face. The last few months have been a time of great trial and anxiety. I have always been a Home Ruler, even when the bulk of Liberals scouted the idea, but I would not consent to grant Mr. Parnell an independent parliament for Ireland which meant the establishment of a new foreign country thirty miles from our shores, animated at the outset by unfriendly intentions towards us. I have not altered my opinion since I last solicited your votes. It is for you to say whether I have forfeited your confidence by remaining faithful to the principle I professed. Mr. Gladstone in Edinburgh said the bill was dead. If that is so, what are they fighting for? If there is a new plan why is it not produced? It is impossible to criticise a bill lacking clauses, preamble or schedule. I hope it will still be possible to reunite the Liberal party and that they may find themselves agreed in the autumn upon some large measure for home rule and local government for Ireland, but I will not pledge myself blindly to accept and swallow whatever may be offered." [Applause.]

Mr. Chamberlain concluded by asking their further support.

The Scotsman's Reply.

EDINBURGH, June 19.—The Scotsman commenting on Mr. Gladstone's speech says: "Mr. Gladstone has rent the Liberal party and he is keeping it asunder. If he would accept Lord Hartington's four conditions a large liberal measure of Home Rule would be granted. Mr. Gladstone cannot be trusted now, as unreservedly as he would have been six months ago to embody the Home Rule principle on a plan that would be acceptable to Liberals."

John Morley Does Some Chaffing.

LONDON, June 19.—Mr. John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, speaking at Bradford to-night, chaffed Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Hartington on being the recipients of Lord Salisbury's compliments, and said that the time would come when they would have to pay a great price for accepting them. He was glad to say a few words in encouragement in what he believed to be a winning battle. Lord Salisbury denied that he would have resorted to coercion except against murderers and other criminals. Why then did he say he would repeat those repressive laws at the end of twenty years? If the Liberal seceders prevent the government from settling the question Lord Salisbury would settle it for them.

Mr. Bradlaugh's strong points.

LONDON, June 19.—Mr. Bradlaugh has issued a powerful election manifesto to his constituents of Northamptonborough. In it he says: "British injustice has often been the mother of agrarian crimes in Ireland. Our paltry, selfish harshness has often been the nurse and inciter of the rash speech and conduct of the Irish. A union maintained by heavy garrisons and the police department, which is an assistant to the army, is an unreal union. There is no willing union between the prisoner and his handcuffs. Union should imply co-operation, not dominance, equality, not subjection. The present paper union is an indenture of forced servitude and not a freely executed partnership deed. Ask the voters to test, bend or break this counterfeit, self-styled unionist coin, even though you know it to be manufactured for the Primrose League by a Birmingham firm."

Justin McCarthy will Try it Again.

DUBLIN, June 19.—Justin McCarthy, "Home Ruler," member of Parliament for North Longford, will again contest the City of Londonderry in the coming elections. In the last election, Mr. McCarthy, who also ran in Londonderry, was beaten by the Tory candidate only twenty-nine votes in a total poll of 3,619 ballots. He believes he can carry the district this time.

Branded as an Unfit Candidate.

LONDON, June 19.—The Liberals of Gloucestershire have rejected the Hon. Henry R. Brand as an unfit candidate for re-election to Parliament and have appointed a committee to select a man who favors Mr. Gladstone's Irish schemes.

A Tory Meeting Ends in a Riot.

LONDON, June 19.—A meeting held in Islington, a northern suburb of London, last night to support the Conservative candidate for a seat in the House of Commons, ended in a riot. The furniture of the room in which the meeting was held was smashed by the turbulent mob. Several women were so badly frightened by the uproar that they fainted. One lady had an arm broken and was conveyed to a hospital. The speaker's platform was stormed by the crowd. The Duke of Norfolk was an occupant of the platform. He was roughly seized by the neck, jammed up against a wall and hustled off the stage. A number of aristocratic companions who were with the Duke were badly handled. The police were summoned and succeeded in stopping the rioting.

The Premier and Mr. Caine.

LONDON, June 19.—Mr. Gladstone has written the following letter to Mr. Caine, Liberal M.P. for Barrow, in relation to a speech recently made by that gentleman:

"Your address quotes me as having solemnly declared that the decision of the country must be taken on the government of Ireland and Land Bills at once. I request you to point out where I made that declaration. This matter is important, and requires early attention."

To the above letter Mr. Caine has replied as follows: "I did not quote the statement in question as a passage of one of your speeches, but as expressing my opinion of certain passages of your speeches; and further, I have read every word spoken by you and fail to discover any statement of yours indicating an intention to abandon the land purchase scheme. I should be glad if I could understand your letter as such an indication even at the eleventh hour. Is this your intention? If so, I deeply regret that your decision was not sooner declared, as it would probably have saved the party from disruption and many of your devoted friends from the painful position in which they find themselves to-day."

The Imperial Parliament Must be Supreme.

LONDON, June 20.—Mr. Childers, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his electoral manifesto advocates an Irish executive parliament empowered to deal with purely local matters. He says he cannot consent to any plan for dividing the power between the Irish and the Imperial Parliament inconsistent with the supremacy of the latter.

A Program of Vigor.

LONDON, June 20.—The Parnellites appointed to take charge of the Irish vote in Great Britain will leave on Tuesday for the various districts to which they are assigned. Thomas O'Connor will remain in London and will be assisted by Dr. O'Doherty and B. Kelly. A great demonstration will be held on Wednesday at St. James' Hall in favor of the Gladstonian candidates in the metropolitan districts. A deputation of Ulster Protestants, consisting of clergymen, magistrates and merchants who are in favor of Home Rule, is coming to London to address several meetings under the auspices of the British Home Rule Association.

Vituperation From Lord Randy.

LONDON, June 21.—Lord Randolph Churchill's manifesto to the electors of Paddington says: "A people's dissolution has come upon us. Such is the title given by Mr. Gladstone to the most wanton political convulsion that in our times has afflicted this country. By the caprice of an individual elevated to dignity by an act of the people, by the boundless egotism of the Premier, the Kingdom is to be disunited for the purpose of securing office, if only for a little while, by the aid of a disloyal faction, subsisting upon foreign gold. The government has been deserted by all who could confer upon it character or reputation. Mr. Gladstone has reserved for his closing days a conspiracy against the honor of Great Britain and welfare of Ireland, more startlingly base and nefarious than any of those numerous designs and plots that for a quarter of a century have occupied his imagination. Nor are the results of the repeal of the union a matter of moment to him. No practical responsibility will fall upon his shoulders. He regards with inconceivable frivolity the fact that upon his successors will devolve the impossible labor of rebuilding a shattered empire. Let the credulous electorate give him a majority and another Irish revolution may be consummated and this most moderate of ministers will be satisfied to complacently retire to repose. Nature cries aloud—nature to whose cries he so long turned a deaf ear.' Lord Churchill stigmatizes the Home Rule Bill as insanity, trafficking in treason, condoning crime, exalting disloyalty, abasing loyalty, and a monstrous mixture of imbecility, extravagance and political hysterics. He ridicules the anticipated beneficial results from the bill, and affirms that "the united and concentrated genius of Bedlam and Colney Hatch would strive in vain to produce a more striking tissue of absurdities than those gravely recommended by senile vanity to a people renowned for common sense."

Insulting All Round.

LONDON, June 21.—The News commenting on the Churchill manifesto says: "We may well ask Mr. Chamberlain whether he is prepared to commit the destinies of the country to this political spirit. The manifesto is as insulting to Ireland as to Mr. Gladstone and is such an expression of party passion as is happily unusual in English politics."

THE PROGRESS OF IRELAND'S CAUSE

A Circular to National League Branches in America.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 20.—A circular has been issued by Patrick Egan, Charles O'Reilly and John P. Sutton, Executive Committee of the Irish National League of America, addressed to the officers and members of all branches. After congratulating them upon the progress the Irish cause has made and expressing the belief that Mr. Gladstone will be overwhelmingly sustained in the coming elections, the circular says: "In face of the desperate and disgraceful attempt of Lord Salisbury, Lord Churchill and Mr. Chamberlain to foment religious strife throughout Ireland, our people have acted nobly, and with the exception of a handful of misguided Loyalists in Belfast, they have shown the world that the days of stupid religious bigotry and intolerance amongst Irishmen has forever passed away. The issue of home rule for Ireland is now fairly before the English people, and we feel confident that the great mass of intelligent Englishmen will support Mr. Gladstone, and by sending him back to parliament with a large majority enable him to solve beneficially for England as well as Ireland the greatest and most dangerous problem that the British empire has had to deal with during this century."

In pursuance of the powers conferred upon us by the National Executive Committee of the league we hereby summon the third regular convention of the Irish National League, to be held in Central Music Hall, Chicago, on Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 18 and 19, 1886, and we earnestly trust that every branch of the league will be fully represented there, as we look for the attendance of an important delegation from the home league and parliamentary party.

SEVERELY BEATEN BY BRUTES.

Murderous Assault Upon a Salvation Army Captain.

KINGSTON, N. Y., June 19.—A branch of the Salvation Army has for the past few months occupied Crouch's Hall, in this city. Three weeks ago Capt. Paul Boorman, formerly of New Brunswick, but late of Albany, took command. Accompanied by his daughter, an attractive girl of 15, and the local additions to the army, Capt. Boorman paraded the leading business thoroughfares nightly before the opening of the meetings, and his followers played tamborines and sang and prayed in front of business places and saloons. This excited the ire of ex-Ald. Jacob Frielweh, who keeps a saloon in Wall street, the principal business thoroughfare. Last night as Boorman, his child and the others were returning home at the close of the meeting, Frielweh with his son rushed upon the sidewalk as the army was passing and assaulted the captain, kicking and beating him severely. Frielweh admits the assault, but says that they knelt in prayer in front of his place with the intention of ruining his business. Coroner Carr visited Boorman to-night to take his ante-mortem statement. The entire community are aroused over the assault and strongly condemn it.

One More Phantom Estate.

CHICAGO, June 19.—A local paper says today that a valuable estate, said to be worth from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000, is being made the subject of an investigation, and if the claims of the all-eyed heirs can be established, several millions of dollars are likely to come into the possession of Illinois claimants. The property is partly located around Mercer street in New York, covering about one hundred acres and on the Jersey shore. It was owned by one Moses Mercer, a native of Scotland, about 1760, and was leased out for 99 years. The heirs have entered suit for recovery.

Lost His Wits Through His Wife's Death.

CRESTON, Ill., June 20.—Jacob Swingley, 45 years of age, last night cut the throats of his two small children with a razor and then committed suicide. One of the children, Maggie, 4 years old, was dead when found. The other, Albert, 7 years old, will recover. Last January Swingley's wife died, her demise apparently crazed him. He became sullen and despondent and never permitted his children to get out of his sight. Yesterday he borrowed a sheet of paper and indited a brief note as to the disposal to make of his property. He was in fair circumstances.

The Abolition of Imprisonment for Debt.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Argument was heard to-day by Judge Donohue in the Supreme Court in the habeas corpus case of the prisoners confined in Ludlow-street Jail, who demand release in conformity with the new law as to imprisonment for debt. The creditors of the prisoners claim that the law is unconstitutional, and the prisoners' lawyers uphold its constitutionality. Decision was reserved

FUNERAL OF KING LUDWIG.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES ON THE OCCASION.

The Sympathy of the People—Mrs. Richard Wagner one of the Chief Mourners—The Late Monarch and His Valet.

MUNICH, June 19.—The excitement among the Bavarian people over the death of King Ludwig remains unabated. The lower classes up to the hour of the funeral to-day thronged the gate of the royal palace awaiting admission to the chapel and exhibiting all the signs of sincere grief and sympathy. People from the country and the mountains flocked into the city all day long. Among the mountaineers was a Tyrolese woodman to whom Ludwig once gave a diamond ring for some service. When he reached the coffin in the palace chapel he fell on his knees beside it and sobbed and wailed.

Ludwig's insane brother and successor to the throne, King Otto, when informed of his accession received the news very apathetically and replied, "So, so, The soldiers march out, then." He is mentally incurable, but his bodily health is perfect.

It is now stated that when King Ludwig was removed from Hohenschangan to Berg Castle he was quite touched at the sight of his valet weeping over the King's misfortune. "Never mind, old fellow," said the King, "I shall soon get the better of that old fool," pointing to Dr. Von Gudden.

King Ludwig was buried this afternoon. The concourse of people at the funeral was immense. A number of persons were crushed in the crowd and injured. Many of the people wept and sobbed aloud as the King's coffin was borne along to its last resting place.

The cortege was preceded by a battalion of Bavarian veterans under command of the Adjutant of the Minister of War, Baron C. de Horne, with deputations of the Prussian Hussars, the Austrian Infantry and the Russian Dragoons (of which the late King was Honorary Colonel). Immediately preceding the coffin, according to ancient custom, were posted twenty-five Gugelmaenner clad from head to foot in black, monks' habits covering their faces except their eyes, following the great crucifix. Behind the coffin walked Prince Luitpold, the Regent, and members of the Royal family, together with the foreign envoys. After the consecration the remains were deposited in the ancestral vault. The mourners throughout evinced the deepest sorrow. At the conclusion of the impressive ceremonies the dense crowds dispersed quietly.

The widow of Richard Wagner, the composer, attended the funeral.

The funeral pageant of the late King Ludwig is described by foreign newspaper correspondents as the most imposing they ever witnessed.

The Archbishop of Munich, who officiated at the church, was visibly affected during the service, and the Crown Prince Frederick William, of Germany, also showed signs of emotion. The weather in the morning was threatening, but later it became clear and fine.

AN AWFUL AWAKENING.

A Sleeping Man Opens His Eyes to Find Himself Surrounded by Fire.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—One of the immense hydraulic dredges of Benson & McNee used in the system of harbor improvements and reclamation of the Potomac flats took fire about 8 o'clock to-night and was a solid sheet of flames in a few minutes. The dredge had an iron hull, but was full of oil-soaked timber and was entirely covered with a double decked cabin. Half an hour after the fire was observed in the city the strange actions of a man wandering in the darkness in a dazed fashion in the park below the White House grounds attracted the attention of some gentlemen who recognized in his incoherent talk evidences of pain. The man was found to be frightfully burned about the body, arms and head. From his disjointed talk while efforts were being made to alleviate his distress it would seem that a coal oil lamp exploded on the dredge, scattering flames so that the whole interior of the cabin was at once a blaze. This man was asleep in his bunk, and awoke to find himself surrounded with fire. He managed to reach the outside of the cabin, jumped into the water and swam ashore, and ran towards the city seeking help. His mind wandered when he was within a couple of hundred yards of Pennsylvania-avenue, and he was unable to guide his steps. When discovered he had traveled fully a mile from the scene of the accident. The dredge has been working double turns and the burned man says both day and night gangs of men were on board, and he supposes a number were asleep like himself. He saw nothing of any of his companions. Unless the men were rescued by boats from some of the vessels in the river some of them have lost their lives.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

The Coming Election Checking the Promised Trade Revival.

LONDON, June 20.—Discount closed at ⅞ for three months and 1 for short. During the past week there was virtually no opportunity for loaning money and few bills were offered. The reduction of the Bank of England rate checked the flow of gold hither and caused an outflow. Although large amounts are expected from the East the Economist doubts whether the Bank of England will attain the strength it ought to have before the autumn drain begins. Later it expects unsettled markets and spasms of strengency, accentuated by a trade revival after the elections. On the Stock Exchange prices were firm from the influence of cheap money, and investment stocks were higher. Foreign securities were improved. The coming elections check the buying of English securities. American railway securities were buoyant, especially low-priced stocks. During the last six weeks the industries throughout the United Kingdom have generally improved and a more hopeful indication of improvement in trade is apparent. The shipping trade is also more active.

INCOMPATIBLE WITH LIBERTY.

The Committee on the French Expulsion Bill Recommends its Rejection.

PARIS, June 20.—In the Senate yesterday M. Beranger read a report of the Committee on the Expulsion Bill. The report recommends the rejection of the measure, on the ground that it is incompatible with liberality and prejudicial to the existence of cordiality with foreign powers. It further declares that the subject is not one for the decision of parliament, but for the judicial authorities. The debate on the matter was fixed for Monday.

A Handkerchief in His Windpipe.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., June 20.—John Johnson was locked up Saturday night for throwing his furniture through a window into the street. During the night he forced his handkerchief down his windpipe with a two-foot rule, and this morning was found dead with handkerchief and rule about six inches down his throat.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THE CHURCH

Cardinal Taschereau's Fulminations Against the Knights and the Masons.

OTTAWA, June 19.—Decrees of the Council of the Roman Catholic Church recently held at Quebec having been cabled to Rome and met with the approval of the Pope, Cardinal Taschereau has issued a pastoral letter containing them, which will shortly be read in the churches of the diocese. The following quotation is from this letter:—

"The cosmopolitan character of secret societies, and that of the Knights of Labor in particular, necessarily exposes many of their members to execute the orders of a council residing in a foreign country, which council at a given time may not only have interests at variance with those of the government to which its members owe allegiance, but may even be at war with God. For these and other reasons the church could not consistently tolerate the organization or approve of the means resorted to in order to attain the desired end.

"The council also deemed it prudent in the interests of the church and Christianity, to consider the secret aims of the promoters of Freemasonry and to warn the adherents of the Catholic Church against joining such organizations, and especially the Knights of Labor, on the pain of excommunication."

In another section of the pastoral letter is contained a quotation from Le Foxill, of France, who was a prominent member of the Masons of old France till last summer. He thinks Masonry has a grotesque imitation of Catholicism, and has its rites, but its promoters desire to have their own ceremonies apart from the teachings of the priests of God, and desire to extinguish and put out of existence the teachings of the Catholic faith.

HOME RULE IN THE PULPIT

DR. WILD DISAPPROVES OF PREMIER GLADSTONE'S BILL.

Sermon at the Bond-street Church Last Night—In Favor of Chamberlain's Scheme—The Nova Scotia Vote.

Dr. Wild preached a sermon last night on the all-absorbing topic of Home Rule. He believed in Home Rule for Ireland as advocated by Chamberlain—that of placing Ireland in the same relation to the empire as Ontario bears to the Dominion, and condemned Gladstone's policy in reference to the Irish question as being a libel on the Conservative party. Scotland, Wales and Ireland would all have local parliaments. This would strengthen the empire and would be a step on the way of making the centralization of government, which would be in Jerusalem. Gladstone's bill would have given too much power to Ireland, and the history of the Land Leaguers and Nationalists did not warrant the granting to Ireland of too much power. The Catholic party should not be so grasping. The reverend gentleman, referring to the inactivity of the Protestant pulpit, said that the men who filled that pulpit should be dealing with the live questions of the day as their Roman Catholic friends were doing. "The people of the south and east," said the speaker, "are Caananites, while those of the north and west are Israelites." They would never agree until the former were subject to the latter. The reverend gentleman denounced the Ontario Government for pandering to the Roman Catholic body in the matter of charitable institutions. The Catholics formed only 16 per cent. of the population in Ontario, yet they got 80 per cent of the special grants. We in this country would soon have an opportunity of discussing Home Rule when we came to consider the Nova Scotia vote. The reverend doctor gained the sympathies of his hearers. He was frequently interrupted by long and loud applause.

Blazes in Three Places.

At 7.15 Saturday evening the fire brigade was called on to extinguish a furniture store occupied by R. Potter & Co., at Queen and Portland streets. The damage sustained was $200 to building and $200 to stock, covered by $1,000 insurance in the Royal and $1,000 in the British American. The fire originated in a stove used for heating glue.

An hour and a half later a defective flue raised a blaze in Mr. Martin's foundry in the rear of 20 Sheppard street. The damage was slight.

Firstbrook Brothers' drying kiln, unburnt at the late fire, was discovered to be in flames at 2.15 yesterday morning. The fire was put out before any serious damage was done.

Art That is Not Art.

Fom the London Spectator.

The "depression" of which everybody speaks does not appear to affect collectors much. Lord Dudley's china, which was sold on Friday week, did not fetch the prices given by that eccentric person; but still, more than £40,000 was paid for specimens, of which many have no merits except rarity or the conquest of difficulties of material. Two thousand pounds, less five, seems a large sum to give for a dessert service, and and £1428 an extravagant price for two large "eventail jardinieres," even if an oviform vase could be worth £902. The gem of the sale was, however, a set of chimney ornaments, one of which is a china ship, and this sold for £2787, a sum which would purchase a really first-class modern painting. We do not believe that such purchases indicate any dangerous growth of luxury, and, indeed, see no luxury in a china ship; but they do indicate that quantities of money still remain with very tasteless people. Huge expenditure on merely curious china is no more encouragement to art than huge expenditure on picture frames would be. Nothing is added to thought or to the general sum of human pleasure by creating such objects. One statue is worth them all.

DEAD END WATER PIPES.

Superintendent Hamilton Gives Some Interesting Information.

Superintendent Hamilton of the Waterworks Department can impart a deal of interesting information in a short conversation. Said he to the World's young man the other day, "You can scarcely imagine how I am troubled with complaints about bad water from various parts of the city. When they come in from all over, a general inspection of the pipes to the lake must be made. But when the trouble is local I generally find the cause local also.

Do you know what a dead end is?

No? Well, when a pipe supplies a district and comes to a sudden stop, shutting off entirely the circulation of the water, the pipe is said to be dead ended. The water pumping down against this end day after day becomes charged with sediment and finally becomes filthy. I have picked up a large numer of these dead ends as I found them but I believe there are a lot of them left. I expect, however, before long to have them all picked up and to have every pipe in the city circulating freely. See here," drawing a rough lead pencil diagram on an adjacent brick wall, "the house service pipe is let into the main pipe at the top. Consequently the surface water only is drawn off. The sediment on the bottom of a 12-inch main sometimes becomes six inches deep. They sometimes try to flush pipes by running adjacent hydrants, but the only way to do it is to open at the bay valves the full size of the pipes they terminate. I did that last spring and the water that flowed from the very pipes the citizens were drinking from was as black as ink."

A MINISTER'S FAREWELL.

Rev. J. M. Kerr Says Good-bye to the People of Agnes Street Methodist Church.

Rev. J. M. Kerr preached his farewell sermon last night at Agnes-street Methodist Church. He expressed his appreciation of the kindly manner in which he had been treated during the two years he had been preaching in the church he was about to leave. He had walked through the streets of St. John's Ward at night and had never been molested. He had gone among the worst streets of the ward where iniquity abounded, and there had preached the gospel of Christ. "When I first came to this church," said the reverend gentleman, "I heard that it was in a great measure devoted to evangelization. I have always striven to win souls, not by oratorical display, but by the power and glory of God. I regret that for the past two years there have been people who regularly attended this church and yet are not saved. But I am sure my efforts in their behalf have not been entirely fruitless. I have always striven to impress upon my hearers not to rely upon the wisdom of man, but upon the strong arm of God to save them." About twenty persons were received as members of the church. Several members testified to the benefit they had received from Mr. Kerr's ministrations.

Boy Drowned in the Don.

John Quinlan, a 15-year-old lad, who was an inmate of the St. Nicholas Institute on Lombard-street, and who worked for Frank Bourdon, the Yonge street hatter, was drowned in the Don yesterday afternoon. Together with some dozen other boys, he was bathing at the second bend above the Winchester-street bridge, when he suddenly plunged out of his depth into a hole midway between the two banks. He rose once and immediately sank again. Some of his companions ran for assistance and returned in a quarter of an hour with John Patry, a young cabinetmaker, who lives at 348 Wellesley-street, and who wears a Royal Humane Society medal for life-saving. After five minutes' diving Mr. Patry found the boy in 10 feet of water. The boy was taken to the morgue. Deceased was sent to Canada last year by Cardinal Manning, and has a father living in England.

The police of No. 4 precinct have a large and undesirable contract in keeping the boys out of the Don. The ground or rather the water can only be covered by men in plain clothes and they must have boats. The bluebottle uniform of the pedestrian officers is seen from afar, and a swim across the river puts the offenders out of reach.

A New Proposal of Settlement.

Churchwardens Howland and Brock have made a new offer for the settlement of the Langtry—Dumoulin case. The aggregate debt of the city churches other than St. James' is $120,000, on which an annual interest of $7000 or $8000 is paid; and if the rectory property instead of the church buildings were made the security for the debt there would be a saving of two or three per cent. per annum in the interest, and an addition to the stipends of the clergy could be made out of the amounts thus saved. It is proposed that the balance of the receipts from the property, which is parish and not rectorial property, go to the various churches, $2500 to be paid to St. James' and the remainder to be distributed among the sixteen churches. It is estimated that this would give the rectors about $800 each.

A Poor Baseball Ground.

One of The World's young men on Saturday visited that part of Riverside Park where a few years since he used to vary by a plunge in the slimy but cool Don the mild amusement derived from fishing with a throw line for the toothsome catfish. This same part of the park civic authorities design turning into a baseball grounds, and a more unsuitable place than it is at present could not well be imagined. The part that is not swamp is a heavy sand. A three-bagger would not more than suffice to carry a luckless batter across a stretch of this sand to first. No small item, either, would be the bill for balls lost in the river.

A Verdict of Wilful Murder.

A female infant's body was found within the fence of the Agnes-street Methodist Church Saturday morning. It was dressed in a cotton gown and wrapped in grey flannel. Coroner Johnson held an inquest in the evening. The infant had been born alive, but there was no evidence to show as to how and by whom it met its death. The regulation verdict of wilful murder against a party unknown was returned.

Why Don't You Get One?

If you are a business man you should have one. If you are a bank or insurance director you should certainly wear one. If you are a clergyman you should always have one on hand to doff to the ladies of your congregation when you meet them. If you are a man at all you will wear one of Dineen's white hats, Corner King and Yonge-streets. x

ABOUT EARLY CLOSING.

SERMON BY REV. DR. POTTS AT THE ELM-STREET CHURCH.

A Powerful Argument—Large and Applauding Congregation—The Preacher's Appeal for the Clerks.

Rev. Dr. Potts preached in Elm-street Church last night on the early closing movement. That the subject was a popular one was evident from the large congregation and the frequent outbursts of applause that greeted the doctor as he enunciated his views on the question. Dry goods employes were there en masse; His Worship the Mayor and Mrs. Howland were also present. The text was Matthew v. 7: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." The preacher divided life into five parts: Work, sleep, intellectual improvement, recreation and religion. After explaining these he took up the early closing question. There were three classes of persons interested: the merchant, the young people and the public, and he wanted to show that none of them would lose if early closing went into effect.

At this stage the doctor held up the circular which the dry goods clerks sent to employers, and read extracts therefrom. "I hold in my hand," he said, "the list of those who have consented to close early, and this will be the list of honor one year from now." This statement was met with loud applause. He then read three letters received from young ladies employed in stores. These letters blamed, not the merchants, but the ladies who purchase. As one of them put it, "These ladies administer physic and then give us sugar-coated sympathy." "The man who says, 'I will open and close my store when I like,' does not understand the power or glare of public opinion, and if he persists in his course he will have to take the consequences." These sentiments brought down the house, so to speak.

Then the doctor appealed to the ladies. He pictured to them pale-faced, exhausted girls, hardly able to find their way to bed after Saturday night's work, and asked them to look at the matter from a mother's standpoint. "We had better made up our minds that this movement is going to succeed" he continued, "for the press has taken it up, and public opinion is also in favor of it. And, young people, you may rest assured that every minister of Jesus will be in sympathy with you, and will assist you." In conclusion he urged his heavers never to forget that Jesus was their one great friend, watching over and taking an interest in all that pertained to their welfare.

An Early Closing Sympathizer.

Editor World: I see in to-day's paper a list of those merchants who have agreed to give their clerks a Saturday half holiday, and believe their action is extremely praiseworthy. It is but right that these employes should have time for much-needed recreation, and I believe the time selected is most opportune, seeing it is the dull season in that particular line of business. I observe that there are one or two exceptions; those men who would grind down their employes and keep them hard at work from morn till night. I hope the public will show by their action in the matter that they are on the right side and will assist the dry-goods' clerks to obtain what they so much stand in need of. These generous employers who have conceded this boon may rest assured that their interests wont suffer, nor will they who have churlishly refused this concession, become millionaires by keeping open. A. SYMPATHIZER.

The Dead.

Sir Charles Edward Trevelyan is dead. He was a son of the late Archdeacon Trevelyan, and was 79 years of age.

Hobart Pasha, Marshal of the Turkish Empire, is dead. Like Baker Pasha, Hobart Pasha was an Englishman, though his reason for leaving the English service and entering that of the Sultan was not, like Col. Baker's, due to scandal. His name was Charles Augustus Hobart. He was the third son of the Earl of Buckinghamshire. Was born in 1822, entered the royal navy at 14, and for bravery in the Brazils was appointed to the Queen's yacht. During the American civil war he commanded a blockade runner, the Don, and passed the Federal ships successfully several times at Charleston and other ports. In 1867 he accepted a high position in the Turkish navy, and was struck off the British navy list for doing so without permission. He made an earnest appeal to Lord Derby, citing his services to Turkey and his action during the Cretun outbreak, by which a European war was probably averted, and was reinstated to his former rank. Upon taking command of the Turkish Black Sea fleet during the Russo-Turkish war he was again struck off the British naval list, England having declared neutrality. He died in the Turkish service.

A Little Boy's Petition.

In Sunday school-books I often read,
That dead little boys can play,
In glorious parks that are ever green,
In a land that is always day—
Where there's no police or an alderman
To collar a kid like me,
For playing beside the river of gold
Or the shores of the Silver Sea.

But the worst of it is, you've got to die,
Ere you taste of these realms of joy—
For here it's considered a horrible sin
To be known or to act as a boy.
We've got to play ball in somebody's yard,
Where the odors would make you ill;
First base is a heap of ashes and truck,
And third is a barrel of swill.

The catcher has got to stand on a tub,
Right field is over the fence;
Bah! I wish the council a tumble would take,
And show that they've got some sense.
Give us a taste of heaven on earth,
Free from policemen and strife,
And you'll find that a boy no favor forgets,
You can bet your saccharine life.
